ONE MAN SHOW

GUYSBOROUGH, N.S. (CP) — Privy Council President Allan MacEachen arrived here Thursday afternoon to discover he was the only person in the area aware of the scheduled meeting.

His staff had mailed 1,500 invitations to the local post office to be circulated among area residents.

Explained the embarrassed postmaster:

"We found them in Antigonish under an empty mailbag which had been dropped on top of them."

'Until Hell Freezes'

Times News Services

Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey told casual longshoremen Thursday that they can occupy Unemployment Insurance Commission offices in Vancouver "until hell freezes over" but it won't help their demands for their benefits.

Mackasey told the longshoremen that their dispute must be settled legally by a board of referees.

The board — made up of representatives from labor and management and a chairman from the UIC — was to meet later to hear the longshoremen's grievances.

"Occupation of the UIC offices doesn't frighten me, panic me or solve anything," Mackasey said.

The casual longshoremen are not members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and are employed only after the 1,800 regulars have been dispatched.

They are protesting a lack of work on British Columbia docks and the fact that they didn't receive unemployment insurance during the recent B.C. dock strike because of a UIC decision that they were unemployed as the result of the strike.

Meanwhile, still fit at 73, former prime minister John Diefenbaker called on his Progressive Conservative party Thursday to "throw away the feather duster and ... hit hard with a club" at election issues.

Diefenbaker told about 750 people at a rally in Dauphin, Man., that the Conservatives are the only party that can defeat the Liberal government.

Another top Tory, Allan Lawrence, former Ontario secretary of justice, said Thursday he believes Pierre Trudeau will not last much longer as leader of the Liberal Party, even if the Liberals are re-elected Oct. 30.

"Even supposing the Liberals go back with a majority — certainly if a minority — Trudeau's days are numbered," said Lawrence, who quit provincial politics last month to run as a federal candidate in an Ontario riding.

Lawrence told a news conference in Vancouver that there is a feeling of "revolution" against Trudeau and his policies right across the country and that Liberal organizers are well aware of it.

Trudeau, meanwhile, arrived in Winnipeg Thursday night after a verbal battle with open-line callers in Thunder Bay, Ont., and spent a quiet evening before beginning another day of campaigning today.

Jeering, gesticulating students surround Royal car

An Apology for the Queen

Times News Services

The Queen today received an apology from the student council of a Scottish university where she was jeered at and insulted by more than 400 students Thursday.

An official inquiry has been launched into the incident in which students chanted obscene songs, hurled expletives and waved wine and whisky bottles at the Queen and Prince Philip during a campus tour at Stirling University on Scotland's east coast.

Stirling, incidentally, was the headquarters of 14th-century nationalist leader William Wallace since immortalized as a revolutionary leader.

The students had earlier tried to stage a sitdown protest against, they said, costly preparations for the royal visit.

University authorities said preparations cost the equivalent of $2,490.

A spokesman said the majority of the university's 2,400 students behaved well.

There were no arrests.

Many of the crowd waved wine and whisky bottles. Others chanted "Queen out" and "Go home, you Hun" — presumably a reference to the Monarch's far-off German ancestry.

One person hurled a beer can in the direction of the monarch as another group of students ringed her chanting "she's no f—ing use to anyone, she's no f—ing use at all."

Buckingham Palace was anxious to play down the incident which one seasoned British reporter described as the worst witnessed in 12 years of covering royal tours.

A spokesman said: "The Queen was not unduly concerned for her safety. She has faced this sort of confrontation before abroad — though never in this country."

The Queen appeared unshaken by the jeers and jostling. However, many members of the Royal party were grimaced.

The local chief of police, William McKellar, who was in the royal entourage, said of the protestors:

"They were drunken scum. Her Majesty's ears were assaulted with some words that I dare say she may have never heard before."

A spokesman for the university said later, however:

"The Queen told us she thoroughly enjoyed the visit. 'She was laughing all the way down the driveway as she left.'"

NDP Seeks A Share In Industry

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett said Thursday his government was prepared to begin immediately to pump investment capital into secondary industries in the province in exchange for shares or some other form of partial control of the companies.

He said he was inviting businessmen to come forward with ideas for joint government-business projects — which he called "partnerships" — and added the warning that it would be the only way companies could get financial assistance from the provincial government.

There will be no more grants or giveaways to companies in B.C., he said. "The day of the ripoff is over. I won't change my mind about that."

On a long-term basis, he said, the time would come when the province would take over B.C. Tel and probably Westcoast Transmission and Inland Natural Gas as well.

B.C. Tel, which has a monopoly on telephone service in the province, is controlled by General Telephone and Electronics of New York. Westcoast Transmission, which supplies B.C. and the U.S. Pacific Northwest with natural gas, is U.S.-controlled. Inland Gas, which distributes in several B.C. regions, is Canadian-owned.

In Vancouver, J. E. Richardson, president and chief executive of B.C. Tel said:

"I have no comment to make until Premier Barrett and I have discussed the matter at the appropriate time. In my view, now is not the appropriate time to seek an appointment because I realize what a busy man the premier is."

He would not elaborate.

B.C. Tel would be purchased at a fair price to be negotiated, Barrett said, but he would not say whether shares would be bought up at the market price.

MARKET PRICE

Today the market was active on B.C. Tel shares with the price ranging between $55 and $57.

The price was $64.50 on election day.

Barrett stressed that financial partnerships being formed in the immediate future would be on a voluntary basis based upon the ideas of the companies themselves.

He noted that during the election campaign he had suggested that Toyota might want to start up an automobile assembly plant in B.C. with 49 per cent of the shares held by Toyota, 30 per cent by the provincial government and 21 per cent by the employees — who would purchase their shares with low-interest long-term loans from the government.

Not all partnerships would follow precisely that example but all would involve some type of provincial control in exchange for investment capital, he said.

He told Urquhart he would have imposed a heavier sentence on the logging company.

The Sierra Club says the logging company, which spokesman John Willow refused to name, was given the logging rights to the Strathcona acreage for 10 years in exchange for the Cape Scott land, which apparently is not good timber land.

The Sierra Club's objections to the swap are two-fold. The first objection is to the concept of trading a piece of an already-established park (Strathcona) for a piece of land which is destined to become a provincial park (Cape Scott).

Secondly, they object to the ratio of the exchange. The 90 acres in exchange for the timber rights to 7,500 acres amounts to a ratio of 94 to 1, favoring the logging company, Willow said.

The Strathcona acreage constitutes about 4,000 acres in the Ranald Creek area, totalling about 140 million board feet of lumber, and 3,500 acres at Oshinow Lake and Gretchen Creek estimated at about 90 million board feet.

The Sierra Club charges that the Cape Scott land is "covered by old growth, poor quality hemlock, cedar and balsam" totalling only about 2.5 million board feet. They say the asking price for the land in the summer of 1969 was $140,000.

MINIMUM WAGE HIKE AT SESSION

Premier Barrett Thursday said the minimum wage will be raised in British Columbia during the special session of the legislature which opens Tuesday.

He would not say what the new rate would be.

Present minimum level is $1.50 per hour.

An official NDP publication, NDP — A New Deal for People, issued during the election campaign, says:

"An NDP government will immediately raise the minimum wage to $2.50 per hour and will review this level annually."

Asked Thursday whether he intended to raise the minimum to $2.50 immediately, Premier Barrett said no details would be given prior to the opening of the legislature.

Muskie Claims Sabotage

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edmund Muskie has charged that his presidential race was victimized by "a systematic campaign of sabotage," including the use of his letterhead to make false allegations that two of his democratic opponents had engaged in illicit sexual acts.

Muskie said he has not ruled out the possibility of filing suit against the Committee for the Re-election of the President and certain White House officials linked in published reports of alleged sabotage.

The incidents mentioned by Muskie and his aides included:

The celebrated "Canuck letter," in which the senator was accused of condoning a racial slur (Canucks) on Americans of French-Canadian descent. According to federal investigators that letter was part of a hoax engineered by a White House official.

More than 14 months ago, Muskie said, facsimiles of his stationery were used to mail a Harris Poll reprint dealing with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and the incident at Chappaquiddick. Postal inspectors did not determine who sent the letters, which were mailed to Democratic members of congress and resulted in complaints to Muskie about unethical campaigning.

Disruption of a Muskie fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton on April 17. According to James Goodbody, the Muskie campaign's finance chairman, the following items arrived at the dinner — collect on delivery: $300 worth of liquor, a large $50 floral arrangement, cakes from the Watergate Pastry Shop and 200 pizzas. About a dozen African diplomats, Goodbody said, and — as a final touch — two magicians were mysteriously sent, including one who flew in from the Virgin Islands. The magicians said they had been hired to entertain children, but there were no children at the dinner. According to the former Muskie aide, most of the bills for the uninvited services remain unpaid.

Several days before the Florida primary, a flyer was distributed in parts of the state on Muskie stationery. It accused two of Muskie's Democratic opponents, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson, of illicit sexual activity. "The flyer was bogus and was apparently designed to hurt Muskie, while tarring Jackson and Humphrey too," said Muskie's administrative aide, John McEvoy.

McEvoy, recalling an incident widely reported during the New Hampshire primary campaign, said, "a number of Manchester residents complained of receiving phone calls in the middle of the night from people who identified themselves as canvassers from the Harlem for Muskie Committee. They were calling New Hampshire

RCMP TO BOOST SIZE OF DRUG, FRAUD TEAMS

EDMONTON (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday night the RCMP will increase the size of its drug and fraud squads and "national crime intelligence unit" to combat increases in certain types of crime.

Speaking to about 75 former members of the force, the minister said an increase in organized crime, "economic crimes" and drug problems will be met with an increase in RCMP sections designed to combat these crimes.

The national crime intelligence unit is to be increased to 112 members from 89, effective April 1, he said.

The commercial fraud section is to be increased to a record level across the country. The section, formed in 1967 to combat what Goyer called "rich-men's crimes committed by apparently legitimate companies and by businessmen who abuse lower-income groups," is to be increased to 161 persons from 128 by April 1.

Goyer told the veterans the RCMP will have to learn to cope with new crimes developing in Canadian society.

"The spread of terrorism within a multinational framework is but one example, and a frightening one. This is a new problem the RCMP must cope with."

The veterans were also told the word Police is being dropped as "the main basis of the RCMP's identification system." Goyer did not affirm that the force will retain the RCMP title, but said a decision will be made "in another month or two."

6-Year Term for Pusher

"Assassination by instalments" was the term used by Judge William Ostler to describe heroin trafficking when he imposed a six-year prison term for the first Victoria man to plead guilty here after Thursday's nation-wide drug sweep.

The raids by RCMP and local police Thursday netted more than 100 persons suspected of drug trafficking, but many more sought by police were still at large.

The raids culminated a six-month investigation by RCMP into peddling of heroin, cocaine, hashish, MDA and speed-methamphetamine. Warrants were made out for 276 persons.

By early today, about 115 persons had been picked up, mainly in Vancouver, Victoria, Toronto, Moncton, N.B., and Hull, Que.

Norman George Urquhart, 26, of an unknown address, pleaded guilty Thursday in Victoria provincial court to a charge of trafficking in heroin.

An RCMP undercover agent, Constable Blaine Froats, 23, testified that Urquhart sold him one capsule of the narcotic for $20 in the washroom of the Churchill Hotel, 1140 Government, July 31.

Froats said Urquhart also drove him to a place where he could make a purchase July 18.

After the guilty plea was entered Thursday, Ostler ordered a remand for a pre-sentence report but Urquhart said such a report would be of little assistance.

"My background is not too reputable," he said.

Asked if he wished to say anything before sentencing today, Urquhart replied, "at the time when I sold it I wasn't doing it for a living or profit."

Crown prosecutor Michael Hutchison said, "this offence, trafficking in heroin, is an addition to a lengthy criminal record. It's not necessary for me to point out the extent of drug use and abuse."

He told the judge the community's rights should be taken "seriously" into consideration before sentencing.

ALLENDE MUZZLES RADIO STATIONS

SANTIAGO (AP) — The Chilean government took over control of all radio stations today as President Salvador Allende's troubles increased with the announcement of an indefinite strike by small business, retail shops, the construction industry and private farmers.

They were called out in support of a country-wide trucking strike to express their opposition to Allende's socialist program.

When Chileans woke up today, they discovered that the government had established a "national network" of all Chilean radio stations "until further notice."

This meant that the president's press office was in charge of broadcasting, thus denying opposition radio stations any voice in criticizing the government.

The Marxist president declared a state of emergency in Santiago and a large part of populous central Chile Thursday as a result of the trucking strike, now in its third day. Gasoline rationing was ordered as some service stations went dry, and some bakeries ran out of flour.

Socred Land-Swap Probe Urged

The Victoria branch of the B.C. Sierra Club has requested Resources Minister Bob Williams to investigate a 1969 land swap between the Social Credit government and a Campbell River logging company involving part of Strathcona Park.

The request came in the form of a letter today from the club to Williams alleging the legality of the land swap "seems to be questionable."

The land involved is a parcel of 7,500 acres in two separate areas of Strathcona Park, west of Courtenay, and a second parcel of 90 acres in the area of Cape Scott on the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The Sierra Club says the logging company, which spokesman John Willow refused to name, was given the logging rights to the Strathcona acreage for 10 years in exchange for the Cape Scott land, which apparently is not good timber land.

The Sierra Club's objections to the swap are two-fold. The first objection is to the concept of trading a piece of an already-established park (Strathcona) for a piece of land which is destined to become a provincial park (Cape Scott).

Secondly, they object to the ratio of the exchange. The 90 acres in exchange for the timber rights to 7,500 acres amounts to a ratio of 94 to 1, favoring the logging company, Willow said.

The Strathcona acreage constitutes about 4,000 acres in the Ranald Creek area, totalling about 140 million board feet of lumber, and 3,500 acres at Oshinow Lake and Gretchen Creek estimated at about 90 million board feet.

The Sierra Club charges that the Cape Scott land is "covered by old growth, poor quality hemlock, cedar and balsam" totalling only about 2.5 million board feet. They say the asking price for the land in the summer of 1969 was $140,000.

The option to purchase the land was taken out in the fall of 1969 by an individual from Campbell River, the Sierra Club charges, and then the land was bought by the logging company.

The title was then turned over to the provincial government in exchange for the logging rights in the two areas of Strathcona Park.

A legal objection to the deal by the Sierra Club is based on the fact that no public auction took place before the deal was finalized, as is required under Section 17 of the Parks Act.

Furthermore, the contract between the provincial government and the lumber company ... fails to state requirements regarding the utilization of the timber resource, not does it specify methods of logging, reforestation or the final disposal of logged lands," the letter to Williams says.

Willow said all the Sierra Club wants is to have the minister look into the situation and take appropriate measures "if an indication of any irregularities should become evident."

Willow said only about 20 per cent of the Strathcona Park land has been logged by the company so far, so that the remaining 80 per cent could still be saved.

He said he does not want to name the company because the club is more interested in information than in accusations.

Muskie Claims Campaign Sabotage

people to urge them to vote for Muskie because he'd been so good for the black man."

In addition, several hundred other New Hampshire residents complained of post-midnight phone calls "from alleged Muskie people who would sometimes call three or four times in rapid succession to ask them how they were going to vote," said McEvoy.

During 1971, according to Muskie, raw polling data twice disappeared from the desk of Anna Navarro, the senator's polling expert at Muskie election headquarters. An entire winter New Hampshire poll and summer New Jersey poll "were stolen," the senator said. One poll disappeared during the night. The other, said Muskie, "was removed during a few minutes when Anna was away from her desk. We were convinced from then on that there was a middle-level spy working somewhere at our campaign headquarters."

The same spy, Muskie believes, was responsible for forwarding internal campaign memoranda to Rowland Evans and Robert Novak that were reprinted in their Washington column. Members of the Muskie staff say they were warned subsequently by Evans that they had a Nixon spy in their camp.

In August, 1971, two campaign documents were prepared for Muskie by his staff, including a lengthy memo suggesting scheduling plans for the fall and winter. "They were so closely held that only a very few copies were produced," said the senator. Nonetheless, he said, one of the copies disappeared from the desk of Eliot Cutler, the senator's chief scheduler. It was later found on the headquarters' Xerox machine, a staple having been removed, apparently before it was copied.

Dick Stewart, Muskie's campaign press secretary, said he received a call from the Associated Press in Boston several days before the

The statement said: "Ted Kennedy has become an obstacle and an issue in the New Hampshire primary. I challenge him to come to New Hampshire and once and for all tell the people whether or not he is a candidate for president." Said Stewart: "No one in the Muskie organization had authorized such a statement, and its only effect would be to hurt Muskie and Kennedy."

At a $250-a-plate fundraising dinner in Beverly Hills, Winner said, Muskie had to abandon his prepared speech because podium floodlights were directed into his eyes. Muskie, never known for first-rate extemporaneous speeches, had assigned an aide in his campaign (of identical height to his own) the task of always adjusting lights. On this particular occasion, said Winner, the lights had correctly been adjusted before dinner. When the candidate began to speak after dinner, however, he was unable to read his prepared speech, gave some poor off-the-cuff remarks and, according to Winner, possibly lost some big donations to his campaign.

In California, said Winner, potential big donors received a fabricated Muskie letter on the senator's stationery. The letter told how support his candidacy with small contributions "from the people, instead of the usual fat-cats," in Winner's words. ## Barrett: Future Thrust in Direction of Refining Barrett outlined his proposal during a news conference with finance editors of British Columbia newspapers.

He said the thrust of development in the future would have to be directed towards refining and manufacture rather than exporting B.C.'s raw materials.

Barrett said he would rather see B.C. copper stay in the ground rather than be shipped overseas before it had been to a smelter — and the same held true for other B.C. resources.

He added, however, that he was convinced the copper would not remain in the ground because companies would come up with creative ways of processing it and providing jobs.

During the wide-ranging interview, Barrett said:

—There will be a copper smelter built in British Columbia, with government assistance. The government is negotiating with Cominco Ltd. but no final decisions had been taken. Other companies with smelter plans should approach the government with them.

—Resources from now on will be developed to give maximum benefit to the people for the next 50 to 100 years rather than short-term benefits. He said he was prepared to face the political consequences of temporary job dislocations that might result.

—The government would be "prudent" in its spending, trying for a small surplus and as a matter of philosophy avoiding deficit financing unless forced to by circumstances.

—A provincial lottery will be established within four years. "But as a fun thing, it is not a great money-maker for the government."

—B.C. Tel will be taken over some day at a fair price to be negotiated, but it is not a high-priority plan at the moment.

Prospects

Barrett said he would be pleased to discuss the long-range prospects of a takeover with B.C. Tel officials. He expanded the invitation to say he was eager to discuss economic conditions with as many businessmen as wanted to come and he would be eager to receive their suggestions.

He made clear he wants to talk most of all about development of secondary industries and ways in which the government can form partnerships in new ventures.

Foreign investment was welcome as long as it was in partnership with the government.

"I have always been in favor of a mixed economy."

In answer to a question asking about the political consequences of investing public money in a company that might go bankrupt, Barrett replied:

"The government will be well-protected. We are not going to invest money irrationally on a hurry-up basis. We won't get skinned. There will be little risk. There's no risk in giveaways — the money's gone."

NO MORE GRANTS

Over and over during the 90-minute question and answer session he said there would be no more grants or financial concessions to corporations in the province.

He opened the news conference with a short statement saying provincial government revenues had increased 16 per cent in September over September 1971, compared with a monthly average of 11 per cent.

He said this was evidence there is confidence in the provincial government.

"It is business as usual — plus — in B.C. Nobody is frightened. I just want to make the point that capital is not fleeing B.C. because of the NDP government."

While he would strive for a healthy surplus there would be a judicious spending of funds in social fields which could in the long run save the province money.

As an example, he said, money spent on locating and helping disturbed children at age six can save the expenses of psychiatric care that might be needed at age 12 if the child had not been helped earlier.

Money would be pumped into preventive health services and into jobs for chronic welfare cases, some of whom were members of fourth or fifth-generation welfare families.

Money would also be spent on better services for the aged and on educational experiments.

The government, however, will not be spendthrift and will attempt to live within its means at all times.

NO TAX CHANGES YET

There will be no changes in taxation in the current fiscal year. Any changes introduced in the January session of the legislature would not take effect before April. The provincial corporation tax will be raised in that first budget.

Talks will be held with industries before new resource taxes are introduced.

He repeated his campaign statement that the government would introduce a schedule of royalties. Using the example of copper, he said heavy penalties would be placed on export of copper concentrate, lighter royalties would be placed on smelted copper and even lighter levies would be placed on manufactured copper products.

The aim, he said, is to redirect capital investment towards secondary industries.

If there was no market for B.C. copper, it might be necessary to leave the copper in the ground until there was a market. However, he was certain it would not come to that as there is a growing demand for copper due to the closure of smelters in North America because of air pollution.

"We're not going out much these days... We're saving money toward last summer's vacation."

Viet Talks End: Nothing Settled

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — U.S. Presidential Adviser Henry Kissinger returned from Paris Thursday night with indications that major decisions are still required in Hanoi, in Saigon and in Washington to close the most critical gaps in a Vietnam accord.

Hanoi politburo member Le Duc Tho, Kissinger's counterpart in four days of secret bargaining, returned to Hanoi today for his own consultations.

He was reported to have told Chinese and Russian officials seeing him off in Paris that there are still many difficult things to settle and he would return for further talks.

Kissinger and Tho have agreed on "neutrality" for South Vietnam, one of the lesser issues in dispute, and have narrowed differences on other subjects, according to an unofficial source with some access to the secret negotiations.

Agreement is still reported to be lacking, however, on the two largest barriers to a Vietnam settlement: Political control of South Vietnam, which is the most contentious issue of all, and the linked military questions that include total U.S. withdrawal from the war.

—A provincial lottery will be established within four years. "But as a fun thing, it is not a great money-maker for the government."

—B.C. Tel will be taken over some day at a fair price to be negotiated, but it is not a high-priority plan at the moment.

Prospects

Barrett said he would be pleased to discuss the long-range prospects of a takeover with B.C. Tel officials. He expanded the invitation to say he was eager to discuss economic conditions with as many businessmen as wanted to come and he would be eager to receive their suggestions.

He made clear he wants to talk most of all about development of secondary industries and ways in which the government can form partnerships in new ventures.

Foreign investment was welcome as long as it was in partnership with the government.

"I have always been in favor of a mixed economy."

In answer to a question asking about the political consequences of investing public money in a company that might go bankrupt, Barrett replied:

"The government will be well-protected. We are not going to invest money irrationally on a hurry-up basis. We won't get skinned. There will be little risk. There's no risk in giveaways — the money's gone."

NO MORE GRANTS

Over and over during the 90-minute question and answer session he said there would be no more grants or financial concessions to corporations in the province.

He opened the news conference with a short statement saying provincial government revenues had increased 16 per cent in September over September 1971, compared with a monthly average of 11 per cent.

He said this was evidence there is confidence in the provincial government.

"It is business as usual — plus — in B.C. Nobody is frightened. I just want to make the point that capital is not fleeing B.C. because of the NDP government."

While he would strive for a healthy surplus there would be a judicious spending of funds in social fields which could in the long run save the province money.

As an example, he said, money spent on locating and helping disturbed children at age six can save the expenses of psychiatric care that might be needed at age 12 if the child had not been helped earlier.

Money would be pumped into preventive health services and into jobs for chronic welfare cases, some of whom were members of fourth or fifth-generation welfare families.

Money would also be spent on better services for the aged and on educational experiments.

The government, however, will not be spendthrift and will attempt to live within its means at all times.

NO TAX CHANGES YET

There will be no changes in taxation in the current fiscal year. Any changes introduced in the January session of the legislature would not take effect before April. The provincial corporation tax will be raised in that first budget.

Talks will be held with industries before new resource taxes are introduced.

He repeated his campaign statement that the government would introduce a schedule of royalties. Using the example of copper, he said heavy penalties would be placed on export of copper concentrate, lighter royalties would be placed on smelted copper and even lighter levies would be placed on manufactured copper products.

The aim, he said, is to redirect capital investment towards secondary industries.

If there was no market for B.C. copper, it might be necessary to leave the copper in the ground until there was a market. However, he was certain it would not come to that as there is a growing demand for copper due to the closure of smelters in North America because of air pollution.

Premier Barrett said it now is possible to construct new pollution-free smelters and B.C. should move right away to cash in on the growing need for copper and copper products.

He said there might be some job loss in resource industries during the transitional period of moving into secondary industries but that problem would have to be faced.

In the long run more jobs will be produced because of the move into secondary processing.

the weather

The current prolonged spell of pleasant Indian summer weather over most of the province is forecast to hold at least over the next few days. Therefore inland temperatures will continue to drop below freezing overnight while along the B.C. coast minimums will range from the mid to high thirties. Highs will climb in most regions into the fifties.

Under these conditions records will be set for minimums and maximums at numerous points. Some cloud associated with a weakening cold front has moved from the northern to central regions overnight and is expected to slide further south but will lessen in amount. The cloud which has persisted in the main Kootenay valleys will again hold temperatures down today but should be scoured out for Saturday.

A Needed Introduction To Some Island Birds

The first hesitant step has been taken and the journey can now begin. The step, in my little venture into the morass of metaphysics, is a new publication for Vancouver Island bird watchers.

The journey part of the simile, alludes to a hope that this first modest effort ultimately leads to a more thorough and complete treatment of the birds of our island home.

Called Birds of Vancouver Island, the 26-page mimeographed publication, is the work of David Stirling, one of British Columbia's most respected naturalists.

In addition to information on more than 230 kinds of birds believed to have occurred, or which now occur, on the island the booklet contains an outline of our topography and climate as well as some notes on the effect of man-made habitat changes on the distribution and numbers of some island birds.

THREE SPECIES

For example, three species which are recent arrivals to Vancouver Island, probably owe their success as immigrants to such human activities as clearing land for agriculture and urban sprawl. They are the house finch, bushit and cowbird.

Others, such as the house sparrow, mute swan and skylark are here as a direct result of man's intervention.

All were either introduced directly onto Vancouver Island or spread here from mainland introductions.

But many of Vancouver Island's indigenous species have been affected by their presence. The extensive second-growth of deciduous plants which follows fire and logging have benefited such birds as the Blue Grouse and Eastern Kingbird.

This last, while relatively rare near Victoria, can be found regularly in summer in the burned-out and logged areas northwest of Courtenay and Campbell River.

DEBIT SIDE

On the debit side of the human-activity ledger for Vancouver Island birds, David Stirling lists two—the sandhill crane and Lewis' woodpecker—that have been exterminated as breeding birds on Vancouver Island as a result of man's propensity for disturbing the natural order of things.

Then, too, there is the Western Bluebird.

Once a fairly common nesting bird around Victoria, these beautiful little thrushes are losing out in the battle for available nesting sites to another human introduction—the European starling.

Birds of Vancouver Island will be an essential part of any serious island bird-watcher's library but those expecting it to be a guide to bird finding on the island will be disappointed.

CHALLENGES

While it was not part of the author's purpose in publishing the booklet, many of us new to the island's birds will mourn its frequent lack of precise information on where to find some of the rarer species.

More important will be the criticism directed at Birds of Vancouver Island by the scientific end of the bird study spectrum.

There will be challenges, questioning the right of some species to be included in the work, as well as debates on why some others were not included. David Stirling was well aware that this is one of the prices you must be prepared to pay when taking that first step.

Hopefully, as I said in the beginning, when all the arguments have been heard and all the questions answered, Vancouver Island bird students will have a complete bird book of its own. If we do, we can thank David Stirling for getting the show on the road.

Buy Land for Control—Young

Ald. Mike Young says city council has only one way of blocking a proposed 154-suite apartment at Dock Street and Dallas Road — to acquire control of the land either through purchase or expropriation.

The matter will be discussed at next Tuesday's planning committee meeting and Young, the committee chairman, hinted in an interview Thursday he is concerned enough about the development to recommend that type of action.

"I think you come to a stage when you have to put your money where your mouth is and, quite frankly, as far as the city is concerned in this instance I think it should do exactly that," he said.

But fellow-aldermen apparently don't share Young's view, and gave him little or no support when he raised the subject during informal discussion following Thursday's council meeting.

Ald. Percy Frampton said the 2.6 acres of waterfront property in James Bay would cost council $476,000, which was "too high a price for land which we may or may not be able to sell later for that figure."

A permit for the $1.5 million development has already been issued and the developer is entitled to proceed. But Young said he is "very unhappy" over the proposed three-storey frame building, "over 350 feet long, which is just another, larger duplicate" of many three-storey frame apartments dotted all over Victoria.

"I think the development of that site as it is now proposed would be a severe setback to our development plans for James Bay," he said.

Young pointed out that if the city purchased the land, it could establish design criteria for any future development and later recover most, if not all, the money invested.

The southerly portion might be used for park purposes or open space, and the remainder for some superior form of development.

However, Frampton maintains there is no need for any further parks in James Bay, and definitely not at a cost which could run as high as about $200,000.

Council recently imposed a "freeze" on all rezoning applications for garden apartment developments, until the zoning bylaw has been studied with a view to imposing tighter controls on the type of development permitted.

"I have heard the mayor and every alderman express abhorrence at the type of three-storey frame buildings which have been going up," Young said, expressing the hope that the planning department's suggested controls would improve development standards.

But costs of unit construction had to be kept "reasonable," he said.

"It's all very well to demand high standards of development but presumably the tenant is going to have to pay for it eventually."

15-Point Jobs Plan

First priority if a federal Conservative government is elected Oct. 30 is a 15-point program to create jobs and revitalize the economy, says Allan McKinnon, PC candidate in Victoria riding.

Speaking at a wine and cheese party, McKinnon said other Conservative plans include cutting personal income tax, revising tax law, increasing the basic old age pension and changing welfare policy so that it will always be to the individual's advantage to go to work.

A Permanent Haven

The nation-wide descent of RCMP and local police forces on drug traffickers, with warrants out for more than 200 persons, is a measure of the seriousness of the drug trade in this country. The police swoop, after months of preparation, was directed at dealers in the so-called hard drugs — heroin, cocaine and MDA. There should be no sympathy for those who have been caught as a result of their illegal operations. They deal in living death and should be removed from any opportunity to continue.

It is a tragedy of our times that so many charges can be laid against persons from British Columbia to the Maritimes. When it is considered that those named may be only a fraction of the people involved, and that their evil trade extends to thousands of victims, not only directly but indirectly through families and others affected, the depth of this social disease becomes clear.

While recoveries from heroin addiction are reported, the permanence of the cure, even in the few cases given as evidence, is rarely assured. The outlook for the addict is virtually hopeless. The outlook for the pusher should be made to parallel it. Society must pay the price of shepherding addicts through what remains of their lives. Since the cost of the habit to the individual is usually beyond his or her means, the victim frequently must resort to crime and this imposes an additional burden on the community.

That is one aspect that could be eased. The present system of imprisonment obviously cannot cope successfully with drug addicts. They can only be released at the end of their sentences to fall into their old ways, and duplicate the sordid routine. An enforced village system, whereby communities of addicts could be isolated, to buy their drugs and live and work in such comfort as they were able to achieve, may be the only solution in the future. Those who might respond to treatment could receive it for what it was worth. But the pushers would lose their customers, and society would be relieved of a multitude of sick and morally helpless persons whose numbers are now reaching alarming proportions.

Indians on School Boards

Cowichan Indian Reserve residents want to have a voting Indian trustee on the Cowichan school board. This wish is prompted by the fact, according to one spokesman, that most Cowichan Indian children are now attending public schools.

For some time Leonard Antoine, of the Cowichan Indian education committee, has been attending school board meetings as a non-voting link between the Indian and white communities. Now the people on the reserve are calling for a representative able to cast a vote.

The way is open to the Indians under existing legislation. Any adult Indian is entitled to be registered as a resident elector or tenant elector — like any other qualified person who does not own property. After two years on the electors' list, the Indian may then stand for office.

Under this arrangement an Indian enjoys the same voting privileges and the same right to candidacy as other citizens without legal discrimination for or against him. The existing provisions make it possible for a reserve Indian to take a direct interest in educational politics — working, for instance, to have all adults on the reserve listed on election rolls in order to build up support for an Indian candidate at the polling booth.

The candidate, it may be assumed, would usually require white votes as well as Indian support to be elected. But it is a matter of record that Indians have already been elected in this manner to one or two school boards in British Columbia. Others can follow their lead.

The procedure has the additional advantage of avoiding a system in which a particular group would be placed in a position of receiving special privileges. Cowichan reserve members will do well to take advantage of the law as it exists and brings forward one or more candidates who earn the respect and support of the electorate at large.

A Rebuff to Separatism

One swallow maketh not summer, but two Quebec provincial byelections this week appear to have convinced Premier Robert Bourassa that "the people of Quebec are for the federal system" rather than separation. In both ridings, Duplessis and Gatineau, Liberal candidates scored decisive wins over Parti Quebecois opponents, with the latter claiming a smaller share of the popular vote than was the case in the previous election.

A number of factors may have influenced the result: personal popularity of candidates, local issues, residual animosities carrying over from events in the Quebec crisis. Whatever the cause, the provincial government standard bearers have inspired more confidence than their rivals.

This is limited evidence on which to draw conclusions in relation to the forthcoming federal election. It nevertheless prompts the belief that separatism, significant as it is as a minority appeal, may be receding in a swing of the political pendulum, or had been overemphasized in recent years.

The results of this week's polling should have some influence on the campaigning elsewhere in Canada in this federal contest. No one doubts the political necessity of carrying Quebec to achieve power in Canada, but any inclination to pay Danegeld may be reduced. Fair enough to consider Quebec as different from its partners in Confederation, but it is reasonable to remember that even with differences, Quebec is Canadian within the national motto defining the country from sea to sea.

PAUL WHITELAW

No 'Phenomene Wagner'

MONTREAL — Claude Wagner has been cutting his federal campaign teeth for the last three weeks as the Conservatives' new Quebec leader — and the experience has been far from painless.

Conservative organizers who envisioned a "phenomene Wagner" — not entirely unlike the Trudeaumania of 1968 — when the former judge and Quebec cabinet minister entered the campaign a month ago were sadly disillusioned. It has become apparent that Mr. Wagner faces a tough uphill fight in the remaining weeks before the election to establish himself as an important, new federal political figure in Quebec.

There are a number of apparent reasons why Mr. Wagner's campaign through rural areas of the province, and his appearances in Montreal and Quebec City, have failed to generate the hoped-for enthusiasm and support.

Light on Law and Order

Much of Mr. Wagner's reputation stems from his strong feelings for "law and order", and the Quebec Tory leader is refusing to play on this in his campaign.

"Law and order" is a frequent theme in his speeches and radio appearances across the province, but it takes an equal — even secondary — position to such issues as unemployment, the rising cost of living, the "remoteness" of the current federal government, and the need for more flexibility in federal-provincial relations.

It's apparently a long-term strategy, for Mr. Wagner doesn't want a limited role as simply the "law-and-order" spokesman of the Conservatives. Although Mr. Wagner's immediate goals remain modest — his own election in the riding of St. Hyacinthe and a small increase in the number of Tories elected in Quebec — he may eventually want a broader role in his party or a return to provincial politics. If he achieves his aims in the current campaign, the Quebec Tory chief would be in a position to set up a new Conservative-leaning party in Quebec, now that the former Union Nationale is apparently undergoing a slow death.

CLAUDE WAGNER
... law and order

Part of Mr. Wagner's less than triumphant entry into the current campaign is also due to the fact that he has had relatively little experience as a hustings campaigner.

As justice minister in the provincial Liberal government of the mid-1960s, he represented the relatively safe riding of Verdun. In addition, he contested only one provincial election as a cabinet minister. That was in 1966 when former premier Jean Lesage decided — with disastrous results — to keep his ministers in the background during the campaign.

Although the Quebec Tory leader has learned much about campaigning in recent weeks, he still has a long way to go to become the seasoned vote-getter at ease shaking hands and making small talk in rural villages or suburban shopping plazas.

Despite all the pre-campaign newspaper reports about Mr. Wagner's charisma, he has appeared stiff and aloof — more like a stern judge than a populist politician.

Intimidating Image

Mr. Wagner has admitted that the fact he was still on the bench little more than a month ago may have intimidated many people — especially in the rural areas where he has concentrated his campaigning.

Another drawback is Mr. Wagner's decision to change political colors; he must convince the voters of his sincerity, that he is not a mere opportunist but plans to remain loyal to the Conservative party.

He has also, in an age when constant television exposure is the life-blood of a major political figure, been largely absent from TV screens since the provincial Liberal defeat of 1966. When Mr. Wagner visited the copper mine in the Gaspe town of Murdochville last week, a miner — who looked to be about 20 years old — turned to me and asked: "Who's that guy?"

Conservative organizers in Quebec are still optimistic that Claude Wagner can swing as many as 10 or 15 seats to the Tories, in a province where the party elected only four MPs in 1968. However it's also obvious to them that it will be a tougher fight than they ever imagined.

"... I asked them to try and understand our motivation ... and the trouble is, they do ..."

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Inside

A recent news item stated that Kharshov has the world's largest prison ... with something like 40,000 prisoners. But why restrict the distinction to that one city only, when the whole of U.S.S.R. is one huge state prison ... with over 200,000,000 inmates. — Volodimir Barabash, 808-4 Street N.E., Calgary.

Critic

James Reston (Times, Oct. 5) says that Hanoi is holding the U.S. pilots as bargaining power at the peace table.

The American public, largely apathetic and uninformed, seems to have chiefly this one interest in the genocidal war their country is waging in Indo-China — "our boys" must be freed. Actually, international law (Hague Conventions of 1899 and 1907, and the Geneva Conventions of 1929 and 1949) states that prisoners are to be repatriated only at the end of hostilities.

Indeed, if the rules set forth by the Nuremberg War Crimes Tribunal were applied, these pilots could be prosecuted individually for war crimes. Nuremberg holds the individual responsible, even though he acts under orders from a "higher-up."

Probably every man of the U.S. pilots held in the North is guilty of arson, incalculable property damage, and the murder of several hundred Vietnamese civilians.

Characteristically too, neither Nixon nor his fellow-gangsters ever mention freeing in return the N. Vietnamese and Vietcong POWs, held under unspeakable conditions by the U.S. puppet, Thieu.

Indeed, when three of their pilots, believed to be repentant, were freed lately, the U.S. administration was in such a panic that it seized the three almost before their feet touched native soil, whisked them off to separate hideaways, and are considering a law to prevent Jane Fonda from travelling. The land of the free — probably afraid the erstwhile prisoners would reveal the truth about American conduct of their vicious and unnecessary war.

But in vain. One has only to look up in the Public Library the Dec. 5, 1968, and July 9, 1971, issues of Life to know the answer. Or glance through "Conversations with Americans" by Mark Lane. — Frances Wilcox, 820 Cook St.

To all my classmates, teachers and friends: It was an honor to participate in the Sooke School Centennial celebrations and one of the highlights of my life which I will always remember. I met so many old friends I have not seen in a good many years from all over Canada and the U.S.A.

Far Away Peoples

You have, no doubt, lost count of the times you have been approached to support yet another "worthy cause." Your reactions to these requests will vary according to your interest, your knowledge, whether the Canadians have just pulled out a squeaker over Boston, or, in the case of Miles for Millions, on the persistence of your children.

With overseas projects there is often a vagueness and lack of immediacy about the whole thing. They are, after all, far away peoples in far away lands. And who is to say that the money will reach suitable and deserving hands? And how much of it is lost in "administrative expenses"? And many other such questions, as well I know.

An incredibly long trail of chance and coincidence found me in Mount Hagen,

Different

"I hate the thought of B.C. getting 'industrial.' Salmon and logging it ought to be, in balance harmonious, and leave as much as possible of the minerals underground.

One can't live on beauty, I know, but it's going to be the greatest asset that any country has in years to come.

My "second home" is so blessed in this direction that I hope they'll hang on to it. Let no one think they can successfully unscramble the egg afterwards.

If you doubt me, come and look at England. We've "been there" and so much of the country is very different from what the travel agents would have you believe. — H. H. Bridge, 2, Ashley Road, Southport, England.

How Bad?

What strikes one about the present election campaign and, incidentally, adds to its boredom, is the complete bankruptcy of the two old-line parties. Neither has had a new idea for decades and both are saying the same thing with slightly different emphasis. Stanfield tells us that he will continue the mistaken Trudeau policies but that he will do it more efficiently. Each says that if things get bad enough wage and price controls may be imposed.

Just how bad is bad enough? Surely it must be obvious by now that orthodox financial measures to cure inflation no longer work. John Kenneth Galbraith, in his books, has explained why and even such an economic reactionary as Richard Nixon was forced to resort to controls. Must we wait until it is too late?

Let's forget tweedledum and tweedledee and give the NDP a chance. They might just have the answer — F. L. P. Anderson, 23-1180 Colville Rd.

Mount Hagen is often an uncomfortable place to live in for it combines the problems of an urban area in an underdeveloped nation with that of a boom town anywhere and where most of the bosses are white.

On September 29, the newest building in Mount Hagen was officially opened. The Mount Hagen branch of the YMCA — staffed entirely by Papua New Guineans and designed to meet some of the needs of the town's large transient and overwhelmingly youthful population — came into being. Most of the money came from Canada. A great deal came from Miles for Millions marches. A small portion of that money came from the 1971 march in Victoria. A very small portion of that money probably came from you.

Your money has been spent. It has been spent well. And I have been asked to say thank you. — Bruce A. McKeon, Mendi High School, Mendi, Southern Highlands District, Papua, New Guinea.

From the Times of October 13, 1912:

Unless surprises of an unlooked for variety upset the "dope" in the race for the Barnard cup, the finals for that rugby trophy will be played between the Law Students and the Victoria Welsh club. Both of these clubs possess considerable class, and they are easily the best teams that have taken the field this year. The Students defeated Oak Bay 30 to 3, in a game that was never in doubt, while the Welshmen had little difficulty in beating the James Bay team.

Knock on Door at Night Sounds Again in Germany

BERLIN — The persistent ringing of doorbells at night, the impatient calls from outside of "Polizei, aufmachen!" and the hasty bundling away of the half-awakened occupants inside, all arouse memories in Germany of a dark and not altogether forgotten past.

These are not scenes from a film on the Third Reich. They are incidents being enacted daily in West Germany, now one of the most liberal of democracies. The victims are Arabs living in the Federal Republic, most of them legally but some not. The official explanation is that they are strongly suspected of links with Arab terrorist organizations.

The shock delivered to West Germany by the Munich massacre of Israeli athletes and the helplessness of the security forces has turned into a single-minded determination to rid West Germany of Arab trouble-makers.

Selectiveness is not the order of the day. A number of the detained persons are members of the Union of Palestinian Students and the Union of Palestinian Workers, both banned last week by Bonn's Interior Ministry. However, even prior membership in either group is enough to get an Arab deported.

The number of Arabs ousted from West Germany so far is unknown. The Federal Ministry of the Interior refers queries to the state Interior Ministries which are in charge of police and the foreigners in their areas and they are revealing nothing. The best educated guesses run between 200 and 500 deported Arabs, a number of whom lived in West Germany without the police permits required of foreigners.

From the cases that have gained publicity and have been accompanied by a wave of protests among concerned West Germans, a partial picture can be gained of the deportation proceedings. Typically, the detained Arabs are driven under heavy guard directly from their homes to the nearest airport and set on a plane for Beirut, Cairo, Amman or Tel Aviv. West German officials have denied they are sending Arabs to Israel but the evidence shows otherwise.

The Arabs scarcely have time to pack their belongings. Often they are not told where they are being taken and telephone calls to friends are rejected by the police for fear that the friend could alert a German lawyer and indefinitely delay the deportation procedure.

Under West Germany's liberal laws governing foreign residents, deportation can be held up by appeal and a court order. It can also be circumvented if the affected foreigner asks for political asylum. Some have managed this but most of the Arabs are not given the chance to undertake either. Within hours of their detention at home they are swiftly removed from the Federal Republic.

By LESLIE COLITT
London Observer

West Germany's "Federal Agency for the Protection of the Constitution," a counterpart to the American FBI, has singled out past and present members of the Palestinian students' and workers' organizations for reasons that appear not entirely to be its own. Both groups are assumed to be closely linked with the Al Fatah guerrillas.

West German officials believe that Al Fatah and the Black September movement, which claimed responsibility for the Munich murders, are virtually one and the same. This theory is also propagated by Israeli officials, leading such pro-Israel newspapers as the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung to conclude that Bonn is acting on the basis of material provided by the Israelis if not at the instigation of Israel.

The searing experience of Munich has not prevented West Germans who otherwise lean to the Israeli side from condemning West German police actions against the Arabs which they compare with the pogroms against German Jews in the 1930s. The German section of Amnesty International has spoken of violations of the "most elementary principles of our laws."

Arab students in West Germany have begun hunger strikes, saying they would accept the deportation if it could be proved the deported students held "illegal" contacts to radical organizations.

The reaction on the part of the Arab States has been mixed. Egypt hinted that the deportations and "harassments" of Arabs seeking to enter West Germany would have a negative influence on the newly-established diplomatic relations between Cairo and Bonn. But apart from a few cancelled appointments for the West German Ambassador in Cairo and the omission of West Germany from the Egyptian Foreign Minister's tour of Western Europe, nothing more serious has happened. Egypt in particular is believed to have hopes of increased West German loans for industrial projects.

Libya has threatened measures against West Germans living there and Algeria has introduced a four-week waiting period to "clear" West Germans applying for an Algerian visa. West Germans in Algeria are being reminded of their country's dependence on Arab oil and the size of the Arab world's market for German products.

Some members of the Bonn government have unofficially indicated their disapproval of the methods used against the Arabs but argue there is little the Federal Government can do.

Police authority in West Germany is decentralized; they point out, so that the state governments also have control over foreigners. This argument ignores the influence that Bonn's Interior Ministry has over the state ministries, but does explain why some states, such as North Rhine-Westphalia, are more careful moving against Arabs suspected of terrorist links while others, such as Bavaria and Hesse, act largely on the most meagre grounds of suspicion.

A Re-Making Of Congress

By TRB
New Republic

There sat Mahatma Gandhi in a loin cloth under a banyan tree in India. Only it wasn't Gandhi, it was Ralph Nader, not in a loin cloth and not in India but in the Sheraton Carlton hotel for eggs and bacon with a group of doubtful and ultimately awed Washington newsmen. For a little while until they got out again into the traffic stream of reality in Washington — capital of a nation suffering from moral fatigue — they believed. They rubbed their eyes; those cynics had seen a dream.

Free of Lobbyists

Yes Ralph Nader says Congress doesn't have to be the way it is; that it can be made what it is supposed to be, a dynamic, vigorous, lively voice in Washington, freed from the dominance of corporate lobbyists and the Executive to which it has been slowly abdicating power for 50 years. And if anybody can bring Congress back Nader can. See what he did to General Motors.

A more improbable figure in materialistic America rarely existed, Mahatma Gandhi? — maybe the comparison is far-fetched but there is the same simplicity of the saint and worldly wisdom of the serpent.

Nader, 38, is tall, thin, stooped, six-foot-four, spidery, slightly swarthy, Lebanese with a large nose, sensitive mouth (with a comical twist in it) and a permanent 10:30 o'clock shadow. He has dark, intense, deep-set eyes under dark curly hair and when he talks he is immediately absorbed in his subject and delivers his thoughts, from a passionately convinced intelligence, with quick, eager movements of his long artistic fingers and mobile face. He lives in lodgings and is as un-American as can be, he has no house, no car and no wife.

Women want to mother him because of a small-boy quality.

What do enemies fault in this man? Anyone with such pretensions to virtue creates skepticism automatically, he must have feet of clay! Avarice? — he is financing this $200,000 survey of Congress out of his own pocket from lecture fees and writings. He tells me he lives on $5000 a year; he can't remember taking a holiday. Sex? It seems doubtful; he is a kind of secular priest of the sect of consumerism enjoying it immensely, devoid of greed, beyond influence.

Power? Here it may be, is his Achilles' heel, but that is just a surmise; one cannot guess where such a man will wind up because there have been so few such men in Washington; let alone Galahads who actually knocked off Capitol Hill dragons. Fortune writes, "He is chiefly responsible for the passage of at least six major laws." His ideas of devoted public service are as intoxicating to young men fresh out of law school as the scent of a girl's perfume. Nader is the father of a whole new school of public service law firms.

Stuffed Shirts

The new book from the Nader organization, Who Runs Congress?, has a lot of good stuff in it and will be followed in a fortnight by the real opus, 490 profiles of members of Congress, 24 to 32 pages each, which may be something of a bombshell. Some stuffed shirts find the impertinence of the Nader group in writing about Congressmen as though they were human almost beyond endurance. "Villainous axe job," explodes Rep. Scherle (R. Iowa).

The fact is that Washington is overdue for the kind of muck-raking that newspapers

... simplicity of saint

... wisdom of serpent

have almost forgotten how to turn out. Corruption today is of a different kind. It is not freebooters and robber barons any more, operating outside the system; taking it for granted that government should be run in the interest of the affluent.

The Payoff

Generally the payoff is the campaign contribution; for example in 1968 oil company executives put up $800,000 and 33 percent of it went to the Republicans. Today we know the administration amassed $10 million from anonymous well-wishers, presumably corporate, just before the April deadline requiring full disclosure.

We know that the Department of Agriculture as a matter of routine notified the big international grain dealers in the Russian wheat deal of a policy change that would skyrocket prices before it ever told the farmers or consumers.

We know that the oil import quota costs consumers $5 billion a year, although Mr. Nixon's own cabinet task force recommended abolishing it, not merely because it fed inflation but because it is a danger to U.S. defense in war by depleting strategic domestic oil reserves. Profits come first.

The nation is fed up on Watergate and ITT rake-offs on Vietnam bombings, on the problems of the poor and the cities. It wants to be let alone. It is the dullest, dreariest, strangest presidential election in history. Thumbing through an old copy of the Saturday Evening Post (June 27, 1964) I found an eloquent demand that President Johnson should debate challenger Goldwater on TV: "I believe the strongest argument for debates is that they make candidates put on a better campaign, with the result, that the man who wins becomes a better president... I am convinced that TV debates are essential."

Who wrote that? Why, our Richard Nixon, to be sure, between jobs; the same who won't debate today because he is so busy with affairs of state. At first we found the switch amusing, then it just seemed one more sour joke; after all, what position hasn't he switched?

Wait 41 Years

So that's where Nader comes in. He isn't sour; he isn't cynical; he thinks he can take Congress and make something of it. He reports that a Maryland Congressman was being considered for the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and was asked, "What's your position on tobacco?" He replied "I don't smoke" and lost the appointment.

He notes that, what with seniority, the average congressman newly elected this November will have to wait 41 years to chair the House Appropriations Committee. Nader's Raiders are probing Congress for items like that and we can see nothing but good coming from it.

SOME JUICY CASES RECENTLY

Question of Political Integrity

An Editorial

A number of recent incidents around the world have brought about a healthy questioning of political integrity.

The questions have been posed in Britain, France, Germany, the U.S. and Canada. The main issue has been conflict of interest, particularly as it applies to government ministers.

The British parliamentary ethic is that when in doubt a minister should resign, even if no conflict of interest is proved. It has been fairly well maintained over the years, the most recent example being that of Reginald Maudling, a man considered a potential prime minister, who resigned during a very muddled controversy about personal investments.

The U.S. system has long been riddled with chicanery but recent scandals have propelled the issues of political morality to a high place in the presidential election campaign.

It is worth noting, however, that all the candidates have issued public declarations of their personal wealth.

In Germany, where an election campaign is just getting under way, the parliament has gone a step farther with a unanimous vote in favor of the official publication of the outside professional interests of all its members.

All this is of great relevance to Canada, where up to now governments have been very negligent about the financial affairs, special interests and possible conflicts of members of parliament and provincial legislatures. If there was an excuse for this it was the evident tolerance by the public of considerable leeway in political ethics. This careless attitude was demonstrated in B.C. through several elections which followed some disgraceful behavior by cabinet members.

In another sector of government, the Canada Development Corporation, an agency set up by the federal government with taxpayers' money to offer capital to risk ventures, has been exposed to suggestions of conflict of interest.

Douglas Kendall, a director of the CDC, was until last March a director of Venturetek Investments Ltd., a private company in which the CDC invested $4.5 million to acquire a minority interest. Kendall's son is now president of Venturetek. The Kendalls say nothing has been concealed in dealings between the CDC and the company. Nevertheless, the deal seems to be a foolish one and ought at least to be looked into by the government.

There have been some pretty juicy cases in Ontario,

DAVIS
... Tough guidelines

too, in past years, but Premier William Davis has announced tough new guidelines following recent disclosures about land investments by two of his cabinet ministers, one of whom resigned.

Mr. Davis demands full disclosure of his ministers' financial holdings as well as restrictions on their outside business activities. There are already howls of protest from certain backbenchers with cabinet aspirations. However, these people should realize that a position of trust in public life puts someone in a different league with regard to financial and other privileges. Public people must expect public scrutiny of their lives and business.

As both Liberal and New Democratic Party opposition spokesmen in Ontario have observed, it's just as well if anyone is scared off politics because of Mr. Davis' guidelines.

It's much easier, of course, to be a crusader for purity when in opposition. Mr. Davis deserves credit because he has done something in government. A similar opportunity is available to the NDP government in B.C. Premier Dave Barrett declared that "open government" was his first priority. Conflict of interest rules — or, better still, laws — should be part of that priority.

Parents in Turmoil

By KENNETH BAGNELL
The Globe and Mail

modern society is in new, deeper turmoil and not just about sex, but over more basic questions such as honesty and human purpose. And for parents, the turmoil manifests itself, often as not, in teenagers who reject every value in sight, either from personal conviction, or a desire to be part of some vague consensus among their peers.

The result, in some cases, is great, a useful exercise of their initiative. But in just as many cases it's bad, with good lives squandered in a search for a new life style that ends on a new skid road.

So my friend at the table asked: What are we going to do about the kids? That's an awful question to face and as for his own daughter, I'm not his man and so I referred him to someone with both the talent and the time to help. But still, he asked me to think about it. He kept drinking and talking and the sentence he said most often was "I wonder how everything got off the track?"

Perhaps, because as parents, we have turned from a first principle of our parents and grandparents: To be entrusted with a child is sacred. And if so, then to influence the child to honor what is worth honoring is also sacred.

This, of course, is one thing to suggest, and quite another to accomplish. It isn't done by regulation, especially trivial regulation on length in hair or taste in music. Perhaps it is done by communicating to a child that just as his birth was sacred to his parents, so his life should be sacred to himself. And if so, it is not something to fritter away.

But how to communicate this? If only we knew. I suspect that when it works, it is done more by contagion than by admonition. The child senses that he is loved because he is worth loving. And if he is worth loving, then he should have a high opinion of himself. We need more teenagers with high opinions of themselves. We won't achieve that while we have a society which regards them as otherwise.

For it is often not what happens inside a home, but outside, that desecrates their ideals and turns them to deep cynicism. We have some policemen who cannot stand them, some shopkeepers who regard them as nuisances and a value system in which they often matter only as consumers. So, in the end, what we need inside the family is what we need outside: a re-birth of the sacred.

Opposition Socreds Promise 'Positive' Role in Session

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, as it is called in the book, is primed and ready for next week's special session of the legislature.

After caucus meetings Thursday and today, attended by nine Social Credit MLAs, the Socreds are convinced they will be able to constitute a "positive, constructive" opposition to the 38 members on the government side of the house.

The Socreds got some good news this week when they learned that former premier W. A. C. Bennett will lead them in opposition. They had been prepared to carry on in his absence, not necessarily a pleasant task for a party which has seen its numbers shrink from 34 to 10, and three of them rookies in the house.

The MLAs Thursday named newcomer Newell Morrison, member from Victoria, as caucus chairman. Dean Smith, member from North Peace River, will be deputy chairman.

Frank Richter, who Bennett last week named house leader in his absence, will take over the opposition house leadership when Bennett is out of the house.

Richter acted as spokesman for the caucus after one of the Thursday sessions and took the opportunity to flay the NDP government for some of the policies it has introduced.

"We have not had an opportunity to see them (the government) in action and certainly their policies and programs leave us somewhat dismayed," Richter said.

He picked out NDP policies on B.C. Hydro, resources and processing of raw materials in particular.

He said the NDP approach to Hydro will likely result in higher rates for users, which he said is opposite to what Premier Barrett had advocated in his years as an opposition member.

He said it has always been a Social Credit policy to "attempt to reduce rates within reason in light of costs of production and demand for expansion of services."

"It's all very well if you want to have brownouts, but with brownouts you depress your economy and when you depress your economy you depress your standard of living."

"So if we want to go back in the dark ages, we'll go back in the dark ages with the NDP leading us," he said.

Richter said the Socreds will not comment on the legislation the government has promised it will introduce until they see it.

"We intend to be an opposition of real constructive suggestions and certainly intend to be very positive and maintain that good image we attained over 20 years or our administration."

4-LETTER WORDS IN DICTIONARY

LONDON (Reuter) — Two of the best-known four-letter expletives in English today won a measure of respectability with their inclusion for the first time in the major dictionary of the language.

The two ancient words are among thousands of largely new terms covering the alphabet from the letters A to G collected in a supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary. Two more supplements will be issued later. The introduction notes the inclusion of the two four-letter words, explaining that they were "once considered too gross and vulgar to be given countenance in the decent environment of a dictionary." Using literary quotations, it shows that the common belief in their Anglo-Saxon origin is mistaken. One comes from old Norse and the other from early modern English.

Project Recycle Gets Aides

Project Recycle has gained the assistance to two volunteers who are working at the Borden Street warehouse as part of their regular school classes.

After a recent all-out campaign for volunteers — which resulted in about 25 extra workers — the project was contacted by the Saanich Peninsula School Board and asked if a work experience program could be fed into Project Recycle.

"It's working for the project and for them," said Project co-ordinator Betsy Sweeney.

Volunteers for work experience assist in the office, sort materials and, with the other volunteers, are winterizing the depot.

Miss Sweeney said, however, extra people will be needed to help in the Project's newspaper drive Saturday. The organization unearthed 50 tons of newspaper during the drive last year and even more tonnage is expected this year.

K. A. Buffam, who co-ordinates the work experience program, said it is part of the guidance counselling operations in School District 63.

He receives applications from students who wish to try certain jobs for one or two days a week for eight days.

The students — mainly in Grades 9 and 10 from the area's three junior high schools and Claremont Senior High School — can learn the working operations of two or three different jobs.

"We try to make them focus in on the general field. Working in a department store stock rooms, for example, where they see all parts of the store operation, is the most popular thing there is."

The program, which was started two years ago, will help about 300 students gain a bird's eye view into the mechanics of different professions this year.

Buffam said the majority of students was interested in garage mechanics two years ago but now has switched to professional and social service employment.

Victoria Agrees To Stadium Share

Victoria city council agreed Thursday to share with Oak Bay and Saanich in a $10,500 operating grant for the Centennial Stadium for 1973.

Acting Mayor Ald. Harold Olafson assured council that in recommending the grant, the Greater Victoria Inter-municipal Committee had recognized the need to reconsider the financing arrangement at the end of that period.

In the meantime, financial support would be solicited from other municipalities and particularly from local school boards which, Olafson said, account for about 80 per cent of the use of the stadium.

In other business, council was told by the planning committee chairman, Ald. Mike Young, that all future public hearings on zoning matters will be advertised in two consecutive issues of each of the two Victoria newspapers.

Staff Err: Munro

An error Wednesday by the campaign headquarters staff of Donald Munro, Progressive Conservative candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, resulted in an inaccurate news story, a press release from Munro said Thursday.

A page 2 story in the Times quoted Munro as recommending William Head minimum security prison be closed immediately.

Munro said today that what he is recommending is penal reform as practised by the present government at institutions such as William Head should cease immediately.

The error was an unfortunate one originating from Munro's campaign headquarters and they take full responsibility, today's statement said.

Munro said he is not urging William Head or any other similar institution be closed down, thereby creating more unemployment. Prison officials are doing an excellent job under difficult conditions, he said.

UVIC CONTEST DOWN TO 3

Alma Mater Society elections at the University of Victoria has narrowed down to a widely-predicted contest between three candidates for two seats on the university Senate by polling time today.

All other positions as representatives of first, second and third-year students appeared to have been filled by acclamation before the 4,500 students went to vote.

David Climenhaga, 2583 Prior, and Robert MacDougall, 1957A Lee, were tipped to beat little-known candidate Michael Hare, 1559 Oak Bay, for the student senate representative seats.

At its October meeting Wednesday the senate rejected a request by the retiring student representative that it intervene to delay the AMS elections for one week so that candidates could voice their platforms.

Platforms of the senate candidates were published in the Martlet campus weekly magazine Thursday, although the rest of the candidates were declared appointed by acclamation and no statements by them were published.

There was one nomination for four first-year positions, no nominations for six second-year positions, and seven nominations for six third and fourth-year positions.

Meanwhile the editor of Martlet, Mike Todd, said in an editorial published the day before the elections that the weekly publication was abandoning news coverage of student affairs.

He appealed for students to volunteer as reporters, but stated that news coverage would only resume if "reverting back to the old format" appeared to be wanted by readers.

"We'd like to say we're sorry, but we're not," the editorial concluded.

Principals Slam Transfer Survey

The entire community of principals and vice-principals of Greater Victoria schools has now spoken out against a survey of pupil transfers sought by the school board and reported Wednesday.

Jack Lowther, president of the principals' association, said Thursday no research had been done to find out what criteria students and parents used in selecting schools.

Boundaries of school catchment areas have been relaxed, and students may now attend the school of their choice.

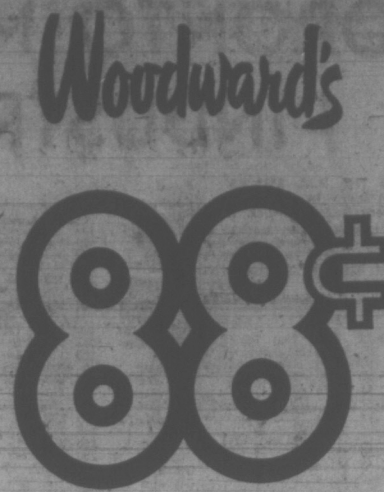

Lowther, principal of Mount Douglas High School, said a variety of factors influenced transfers of students "to the point where no school can be judged the best."

The factors were: age of the school, lack of room, geographical area, proximity of boundaries and boundary shifts, inflations of classes in some schools by special classes, and publicity earlier this year about shifts or extended days at Mount Douglas, Cedar Hill and Central schools.

"My question to the trustees is: are we running an educational system with a positive approach or are we running a popularity contest?" Lowther asked.

Lowther's remarks followed similar objections expressed by Reynolds school principal Bruce Hoadley. Hoadley said students transferred to schools outside their area for particular reasons, such as special classes, rather than for reasons of school popularity.

Liberal candidate for Victoria federal riding David Groos told a coffee party Thursday evening he had introduced three bills in Parliament in the last session which would safeguard the Victoria waterfront.

Groos told about 50 persons at George Jay Elementary School he would re-introduce the bills if re-elected.

The bills, he said, would include provisions for: establishment of a blind navigational system along the coast, regulations that all ships bound for Canadian ports must have competent crews and masters and must report their navigational aids, a traffic control system and a clean-up station located at an isolated base where damaged vessels could discharge their cargo.

At an earlier coffee party attended by 100 at the Colonial Inn Wednesday evening, Groos accused the previous Conservative government of spending millions of dollars on useless military equipment.

Gunning Plans To Finish Term

Reversing her decision of August, Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning will remain in office until her term expires Dec. 31, 1973.

Before the provincial election in which she was an unsuccessful candidate, Mrs. Gunning said she was satisfied Saanich programs in which she had a particular interest had progressed satisfactorily and would allow her to retire in mid-term, which suited her personal situation at that time.

"I have thought about it and it seems now I'm able to carry on for the second part (of the two-year term) and I would like to finish the term," she said today.

The alderman noted she had been re-elected last year "with a good vote of confidence," and that her private life now permits her staying on as a member of council.

She also said there are matters of concern to her at both the municipal and regional levels of local government where policies are being developed and which lie within her immediate purview as chairman of council's lands and housing committee.

For example, land assembly or land banks employed by municipalities as a tool of development, which has been tried successfully by Saanich.

Ald. Gunning said the subject is being explored by regional planners and will be dealt with in an expansion of a University of B.C. study completed this year for the Union of B.C. Municipalities and financed by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

More School Funds Asked By Saanich

Saanich Peninsula school board has responded to Education Minister Eileen Dailly's invitation to report "emergent circumstances" by asking for extra funds to cover transportation and resource material costs.

The board backs up a request for $26,200 by pointing out that overcrowding in the schools has necessitated extra bus transportation to meet the Claremont extended-day system and to transfer elementary students out of the Sidney district.

All extracurricular trips have had to be cancelled because the basic transportation budget already has a projected over-expenditure of $18,000.

An urgent need also exists for provision of elementary fiction and supplementary instruction reading material as well as film strips to replace or supplement present audiovisual equipment.

Saanich school trustees would like to spend about $8,000 on supplies for the instructional resource materials centre now established in a former bomb shelter in Mt. Newton Junior High School.

Cyclists Warned of Dark

With nightfall arriving earlier, Victoria police Thursday reminded bicyclists to exercise caution.

Inspector Richard Berry of the traffic section said a cyclist has the same rights and duties as the driver of a motor vehicle.

Adults and minors who commit any infraction of the bicycle laws in the Motor Vehicle Act are subject to a $10 fine. Juveniles would be summarily referred to juvenile court, said Berry.

So far this year 53 cyclists have been involved in accidents in Victoria and one was killed. During the same period last year, there were 38 bicycle accidents.

"A cyclist has no protection when struck," said Berry. "they don't generally get off without injury."

Berry cited some of the major rules which should be observed by all cyclists:

- All bicycles must be equipped with a lamp on the front during darkened hours and a red reflector or tail light must be affixed to the rear.
- Flashlights worn on arms or legs are illegal.
- Clothing that reflects light should be worn at night.

- Bicycles should be kept in good operating condition.
- Tires should have good tread, handlebars tight and brakes in good condition.
- Cyclists should be alert.

Classification No Help To Movie Ruled Obscene

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver men and a company Thursday were fined a total of $1,275 for possession of an obscene film which had already been approved by the provincial government film classifier.

A county court jury found them guilty on a charge which involved one film but acquitted them of a further charge which involved two other films.

Judge G. B. Ladner fined George McFall $750, Paul Candella $500 and G. J. M. Amusements Ltd. $25.

The Crown contended that even though the film had been approved under the B.C. Motion Picture Act, a provision in the criminal code of Canada which bans the public display of obscene movies took precedence.

Farmers Continue Road Block

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — A group of farmers Thursday blocked a road with cars, trucks and farm vehicles for the second straight day to prevent the delivery of poles for a transmission line being built north of Dawson Creek by B.C. Hydro.

New Pacific Salmon Treaty Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Thursday he'd like to see a whole new agreement between Canada and the U.S. over taking of salmon on the Pacific coast.

The minister's comment came when he was asked about a decision by the U.S. Senate to authorize that country's $7 million share of the cost of improving the Fraser River salmon fishery.

Wildfowl Sanctuary Enlarged

LADNER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis announced Thursday that Ottawa has spent $2.5 million to double the size of the George C. Reifel waterfowl refuge on Westham Island at the mouth of the Fraser River. The refuge, now 1,531 acres, will become the B.C. headquarters of the Canadian Wildlife Service. The refuge was started by the B.C. Waterfowl Society in 1961 with 98 acres of land on a 30-year lease from the late George C. Reifel.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A woman who got a taxi driver to help her remove a television set from a hotel room was given a suspended sentence and a one-year probationary term for theft over $200 in provincial court Thursday.

Arlene Diane Mosley, 23, of 108-575 Marfield, pleaded guilty Sept. 28 to stealing the $400 set and two bedspreads worth $25 each Sept. 20.

The woman said she stole the items because she needed the money for rent. Judge William Ostler told prosecutor John Macintyre, "She must be stronger than she looks."

"I took it home in a cab. I was very drunk," said Mosley.

Asked how she carried the set, she replied, "I got the cab driver to help me."

"It's hard to imagine a more extraordinary case," said Ostler.

Keith E. Langlois, 18, of 2606 Fernwood, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one-year probation for theft under $200.

He was walking through a Cook Street parking lot Sept. 29 when he noticed a car door open. He stole a Royal Bank of Canada money bag containing $155 from the glove compartment.

"It's a serious charge of fraud and he stands there laughing and giggling," said Macintyre of Stanley William Ralph, 20, of 1414 Vining, who pleaded guilty to the charge Sept. 29.

After Macintyre's remark, the brother of the accused stood up, identified himself, and said, "The way he's been going about things the past year..."

Ostler remanded him to Oct. 12 to obtain a pre-sentence report.

A Victoria police detective testified that between Aug. 28 and Sept. 6 Ralph purchased a hi-fi set worth $25.94 and paid for it with a cheque drawn on a bank account which was $30 overdrawn.

He was given a suspended sentence and a one-year probationary term.

Sidney Alfred Mace, 35, and Margaret Mace, 33, of Quadra Island, pleaded guilty to a joint charge of shoplifting several small items, valued at $10, from a Saanich department store Oct. 10.

The man was fined $250 and the woman was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation.

In traffic court, five persons were fined $350 each by Judge Harold Alder for impaired driving.

They were Ronald Darrell Warren, 56, of 141 Homer; Saanich; Roland Frank Chaput, 45, of 1004 1/2 Balmoral; Ralph Edward Harvey, 21, of 5-2122 Cook; Gaber Kaszab, 38, of 10379 McDonald Park; Sidney; and Ralph Alexander Stanfield, 21, of 1455 Denman.

BARRETT RETIRES VIP CAR

Premier Dave Barrett said Thursday he is retiring the B.C. Railway's VIP club car to the provincial archives as a symbol of the end of circus and showmanship in British Columbia.

He said the private coach, used by former premier Bennett for trips along the railway, was the last Barnum and Bailey coach in the province and would go to the archives so people could see how things used to be in the province.

Barrett, now president of B.C. Railway, said he will travel in an ordinary coach car like everybody else.

He added that one of the first orders he has given is to improve the food service on the railway. "It's terrible."

Barrett said the new board of directors would consist of Joseph Broadbent, returning as general manager, Labor Minister William King, Robert Swanson, a recently-retired civil servant who was chief railway inspector, and Ted Rowland of Williams Lake, a former CCF MLA.

Judge Criticizes 'Double Standard' STUDENT WINS HIGHEST PRIZE

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Provincial court Judge G. O. Stewart criticized today what he termed a "double standard" of justice.

He said the Crown often asks for leniency for a white, middle class, educated person and jail sentences for non-white, uneducated persons.

He made the comments when the Crown and defence counsels asked for leniency in passing sentence on a woman who pleaded guilty to a drug offence.

Both Crown counsel Paul McMullen and defence lawyer Dave Jenkins asked for leniency in sentencing Janet Marcus, 19, a nursing student who admitted to trafficking in MDA July 14.

Judge Stewart remanded her to Oct. 27 for sentencing and said he wanted a "pre-sentence report."

Judge Stewart said his criticism was not directed specifically at the two lawyers but noted that Miss Marcus was 19 and at the time of the offence, female and white middle class.

The Crown wanted leniency in this case, he said, but "if she were Metis, 19, male with a Grade 6 education, the Crown would be asking for her to be put away."

Timothy Lott, son of Claremont Senior High School principal Joseph Lott, has been awarded the Saanich Teacher's Association top prize, a $300 scholarship.

A 1972 graduate, now studying architecture at University of British Columbia, Lott was a member and track enthusiast.

The Maurice F. Connors Memorial Scholarship is the big prize among awards given to students for outstanding service to the school as well as for academic ability and citizenship.

Other prize winners are Guiseppe Olivetto, 4983, Cordova Bay Rd., $150, and Anita Marie Copeland, 8503 Aldous

Additional prizes were awarded to Industrial-Commercial students Terry Hanna, Larry Zasitko, Ruth McIver, Gail Howdestad and Margaret Haggart.

No Blame In Death Of Faller

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A coroner's Jury inquiring into the Oct. 2 death of faller Igino Pasqualini recommended Thursday that steps be taken to reduce the noise caused by power saws so fallers will not require earmuffs and that windfalls be cut up prior to falling trees.

The jury attached no blame in the death and ruled that Pasqualini, 35, died instantly of a skull fracture and brain damage when struck by a rolling log in the Sarita River area of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Franklin River Division, about 50 miles southeast of Port Alberni.

Evidence at the inquest indicated that Pasqualini did not hear warning shouts from a nearby trainee faller when a log he had bucked previously rolled about 25 feet down a steep slope and struck him.

CONSERVATIVE ESQUIMALT - SAANICH

The incredible government bungling which has produced an unemployment insurance fund deficit that could easily hit $700,000,000 by the end of this year is just one part of the four-year national scandal that has been the Trudeau Regime.

Haphazard, ill-conceived welfarism and the unemployment insurance mess now facing the taxpayer has been Canada's lot since the Trudeau clique took over in Ottawa.

Canadians can no longer tolerate such mismanagement of their business, but the Liberals indicate they plan no improvements. If anything, they suggest, the situation will only worsen.

The Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich hinted as much, when he said at his nominating meeting "it is essential that we maintain a high level of taxation" to support what the Liberals claim is social reform.

BUT . . .

A Stanfield Conservative government in Ottawa will immediately move to put the Canadian economy back on sound footing, with positive programs of job-creation replacing the unthinking, demoralizing and bankrupting handouts the Trudeau regime has used to create a generation of welfare bums.

Mr. Stanfield is committed to full employment policies because the Conservative Party believes Canada needs the contributions of all citizens and that the vast majority of jobless Canadians now would prefer to live from the fruits of their own efforts.

Donald Munro, your Conservative candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, is a member of the Stanfield team and the best man for the big job ahead in Ottawa.

Athletics Are Back After 41 Years

DETROIT (AP) — In 1931 Herbert Hoover was president, champagne was illegal, and manager Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics were the American League baseball champions.

A lot has changed in the 41 years since.

But, in this moment when nostalgia is in, one thing is suddenly the same—the Athletics, now of Oakland, are again American League champions. They will carry their elusive pennant into Cincinnati where they'll face the National League champion Reds beginning Saturday in the World Series opener.

It took a lot of worry, persistence and the maximum of five games before the Athletics overcame Detroit Tigers 3-1 Thursday to take the playoffs three games to two.

"The day I got traded from the (Chicago) Cubs, Dick Williams called me at my house and said, 'We're going to put you in the World Series.' And damned if he didn't," said Oakland pitcher Ken Holtzman, smiling as he sat quietly in front of his clubhouse locker.

Holtzman is manager Williams' choice to pitch the Series opener and the Athletics will have suspended shortstop Bert Campaneris back in action, although Reggie Jackson may be out with a pulled hamstring muscle suffered in a successful steal of home plate Thursday.

"I'm just elated to no end," said owner Charlie Finley. "After we won the first two games I was sure we'd win it all."

"Then after the first loss I was worried. After the second loss I was really worried. And throughout the game today I was tremendously worried."

"It was a long road, a long road, a long road."

Oakland won Thursday on the strong arms of John (Blue Moon) Odom and Vida Blue, plus some questionable Tiger fielding and the running of Jackson and his replacement, George Hendrick.

Winner Odom gave up an unearned run in the first inning in pitching a two-hitter for five frames before getting an upset stomach. Blue finished the job with a lightning fastball, allowing three harmless singles in picking up the save.

Campaneris, suspended by league president Joe Cronin for the last three playoff games for throwing a bat at Detroit pitcher Lerrin La Grow, joined in the Oakland post-game bedlam but wasn't saying much.

Jackson opened the Athletics' second with a walk off loser Woodie Fryman, stole second, and reached third on a long fly out by Sal Bando.

Mike Epstein was hit with a pitch and Gene Tenace struck out before Epstein broke for second on a steal, hoping Tiger catcher Bill Freehan would throw to second and give Jackson a chance to steal home. And that's what Freehan did, both runners sliding in safe despite Tony Taylor's quick return throw to the plate.

Jackson was raked up on the slide at plate and replaced by Hendrick, who reached first leading off the fourth as shortstop Dick McAuliffe's throw was weak for an error as it apparently pulled first baseman Norm Cash off the bag.

Hendrick took second on Sal Bando's bunt and scored the winning run on a single by Tenace who was 0-for-15 in the playoffs.

Regals: The Culmination Of Another Fine Season

Brian Hughes was saying that yes, it had been a trying season for the Regals, until lately, but now the club is playing fine soccer.

Hughes is the eager, young man Ladysmith's Jim Irvine plucked out of Wales two and one-half years ago, when he organized a semi-professional club here to play in the newly-conceived Western Canada Soccer League.

It was Irvine's dream then that summer soccer deserved a place in the Victoria scene and that this might even provide a stepping stone for some youngsters in the city to achieve the opportunity of playing in higher company and, if they showed the talent, perhaps in pro soccer in England.

The inaugural season was a success, at least on the field, for the Victoria side. Even if Irvine did lose money, that was no surprise. He expected to. And his main point was proven. Hughes had done what Irvine had suggested he might. He had taken younger players, mixed them in with the old, and helped to develop them into competitive senior players.

There were troubles the next season. That was last year, and the league foundered and all but went under. It did on the prairies. Still, it was an excellent team in Victoria, with Hughes returning for his second season, and Irvine spending even more money, so deep was his romance for the game.

By Any Other Name, The Same

Internal problems, and a resultant shakeup in the club directorate, for whatever reasons, disrupted the off-season happenings last spring, and when play started again this year, it was no longer the Royals of the Western Canada League.

It was the Regals of the Premier Soccer League, and all the teams were in B.C.

Hughes had returned again as well, not only as coach, but this time as a resident. He had liked what he had seen earlier, and had opened a business in town.

Meanwhile, the development of another competent and attractive soccer side fell to Hughes, and new club president Jack Adams, Irvine was out.

As a matter of fact, Hughes will be the first to admit that the club fell upon evil times early in the season, but not for the usual reasons — lack of competent players.

"It was just the luck of the play," he said last week at a reception at the University of Victoria, where he will coach the collegians this winter.

"We appeared to be playing well enough at times, but we couldn't seem to do anything right in front of the goal. 'But sometimes, it goes that way,' he added. 'You get three or four good chances, fall to score; then the other side gets one chance, and bang, they have a goal.'"

"I figured we'd come around," he added, while not suggesting that perhaps part of the problem stemmed from the fact that he, Hughes, had been injured much of the time in early season.

Putting Credit Where It Belongs

But all of that was a couple of months ago. Since then, the Regals have been red-hot, and the best club in football in the province.

Monday's 4-0 win over Eintracht was their eighth straight game without defeat and, with their season's record standing at 9-7-6, and second place all but assured, it is a relatively simple matter to see what that string of successes has meant to the club.

Needless to say, the Regals have proven their ability, and when it is recalled that in those last eight games, six were shutouts, what more could have been asked?

Next are the league playoffs, hopefully, and possibly depending on the whim of the B.C. Soccer Commission. Because there just might be a conflict of dates with the opening of the Pacific Coast Soccer League.

Meanwhile, a face-to-face meeting is scheduled between the Commission, PSL officials, and the Canadian Soccer Association over suspension of the PSL for non-payment of transfer fees for the use of amateur players.

This has been a continuing fuss, and hopefully the head-to-head talks will settle once and for all the differences between the two groups and also the question of the playoffs and the eligibility of the players involved.

Meanwhile, up at the University, the soccer team will be in capable hands this winter. Hughes will see to that.

And I like to think that all of this is a tribute to Jim Irvine as well.

Jets' Bordeleau Blasts Off Best

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
It was an evening to remember and Christian Bordeleau made the most of it.

The World Hockey Association had arrived in Madison Square Garden and while only 6,273 paid to watch a conglomerate of former National Hockey League players and minor pros, they didn't go home entirely disinterested in the performance.

Bordeleau, who followed team-mate Bobby Hull from the NHL Chicago Black Hawks to Winnipeg, scored four goals to pace the Jets to a 6-1 win over New York Raiders in the WHA debut for both clubs.

Elsewhere Thursday night, New England Whalers edged Philadelphia Blazers 4-3 at Boston and Houston Aeros nipped Chicago Cougars 3-2 in the Texas city in two other inaugural outings.

Larry Pleau rapped in his own rebound with just over two minutes remaining in the game at Boston to give the Whalers their win.

Philadelphia jumped into a 2-0 lead, Derek Sanderson and Ron Plumb providing the offence, before the Whalers, playing in front of 11,692 fans, broke Parent's shutout, Tom Williams scoring at 13:49 of the first period.

tallest rugby posts in Canada, perhaps in world. Rugby Vikings won't be aiming kicks between new posts this weekend. They'll be in action at Centennial Stadium Saturday and Sunday in four-team tourney that also involves UBC, Calgary and Alberta.

Rugby Vikings Glad To Get Back Home

There's no place like home and University of Victoria Vikings rugby club is counting on it.

Vikings host the remainder of the Canada West University Athletic Association tournament at Centennial Stadium Saturday and Sunday after dropping their opening game 40-18 to University of British Columbia Thunderbirds Thursday in Vancouver.

The tournament, first annual, is a round-robin affair also involving University of Calgary and University of Alberta, Edmonton.

Calgary posted a 14-7 victory over Alberta in first-round action.

Saturday at Centennial, Vikings meet Alberta in a 1 p.m. contest while UBC plays Calgary at 2:30. Sunday's games pit UBC against Alberta at 1 p.m. and Vikings against Calgary at 2:30.

Thursday's victory gave UBC the Wightman Boot, emblematic of rugby supremacy against UVic. Ray Banks kicked 16 points for the winners on two converts, three penalty goals and a drop goal. Garth Hendrickson counted two tries while Leigh Hiller, Rick Bourne, Doug Carr and Spence McTavish got one each.

Thunderbirds led 22-0 at half time but Vikings rallied in the second half on a pair of tries by Rick Rollins and one by Steve Thomson. Bruce Pantou converted all three.

In an exhibition game preceding the main event, UBC won down UVic Jutes 13-6. Ken McCrae scoring a try and David Horton converting for UVic.

Chargers, who led 25-0 at half time, dropped Hornets 47-7 on the weekend.

Jim Gardner and Rich Jones each scored two touchdowns for Chargers while other majors were added by Kim Jackson and Kevin Hughes. Jackson also kicked two converts.

Royal Edmondson scored the lone Tiger touchdown.

Goalie Brilliant

Brilliant goalkeeping by Ron Toffee of James Bay Athletic Association averted a rout and provided some outstanding action for approximately 350 Victoria Intermediate Hockey League fans Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Toffee, with some lightning moves, made a total of 43 stops.

But Stokers North Americans, ahead 4-0 seven minutes into the second period, went on to take the game 4-3.

At the other end of the ice, Steve Kishkan parried 16 shots.

Rocks Get Pick Of Island Crop

Victoria Shamrocks appear to have drawn a high hand for the first Western Lacrosse Association draft of over-age juniors in January.

During the first round, the Irish have exclusive rights to all Vancouver Island players as well as an opportunity to pick up 21-year-olds from the Mainland.

Cocquital Adanacs, last-place finishers this season, have the first choice in the opening round. Shamrocks have second pick, Vancouver Burrards, third, and league-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies, fourth.

Previously, each team had affiliates in local junior leagues from which to draw talent.

Line Calls Rile Beaten Nastase

BUCHAREST (AP) — Stan Smith tamed Ilie Nastase 11-9, 6-2, 6-3 in a stormy tennis match today and sent the United States off to a 1-0 lead in the Davis Cup final against Romania.

The drama came to the boil with a series of disputes over line calls in the closing games of the 72-minute first set.

Three times Enrique Morea, the Argentine referee, intervened and overruled linesmen's decisions, and each time the point was given in the American's favor.

Nastase appeared upset by the controversies and his game disintegrated, though a crowd of 6,000 fans at the Progresul Stadium roared for him.

The Romanians lost to the Americans in the challenge round 5-0 in 1969 and 3-2 last year, but many believed, until today, that they hold the upper hand in this series.

Rota Leads Rout

Victoria Cougars will be out to snip an unbeaten streak when they tackle Edmonton Oil Kings in a Western Canada Hockey League game Saturday night at Memorial Arena.

Oil Kings, at the top of the Western Division of the league, picked up a third straight win Thursday night by thumping host Vancouver Nats, 8-2.

Darcy Rota, a 19-year-old centre, sparked the Edmonton offence by scoring four goals. Rota, whose older brother Randy is with the Montreal Canadiens' organization, also picked up three assists to be in all but one Oil King tally.

Edmonton sifted through Vancouver's defence with such regularity that after the sixth goal, Vancouver goalie Jack Cummings lost his temper, broke his stick over the crossbar and was pulled from the game. Bob Klim replaced him and allowed two goals in the final 18 minutes of play.

Cougar Attacks Family Pet In Campbell River Region

Bruce Parker of Victoria called earlier this week with a tale worth repeating — without embellishment — although we do not necessarily subscribe to his current philosophy.

Parker, accompanied by his wife Dorothy and four-year-old son Chris on a deer-hunting trip, camped for three nights at Klaklaka Lakes in the Nimpkish Valley area over the weekend.

After other hunters camping at the same spot pulled out, Parker grew worried about leaving his family alone. He had found fresh signs of cougars in the area and remembered an attack near Butte Lake during the summer.

Consequently, he also pulled up stakes and drove his camper back to Beavertail Lake (near the dam on Upper Campbell Lake), where they camped Monday night.

Parker was up at the crack of dawn Tuesday and returned from hunting around 10 a.m.

A little later, after hearing his beagle, Sam, bark once — a terrific row broke loose outside the camper.

Parker jumped out of the back of the camper and landed between a cougar and Sam, who was being pursued.

Later he confessed he didn't really know what he expected to accomplish by calling Sam, but there was no time for analysis at that particular moment.

While Parker was frantically yelling to the dog, and also to his wife to bring the rifle from the cab of the pickup, Sam raced around him and attacked the cougar.

The beagle then ran away, again — but not fast enough.

The cougar caught up in a couple of bounds and raced for the dense bush with Sam in its mouth.

Meanwhile, Parker had grabbed his rifle.

A snap shot and the cougar dropped dead but Sam continued to move, running around in circles.

A fang had penetrated his skull.

"The part that hurt the most was having to shoot my dog," said Parker.

The cougar, later identified as a five-year-old female, was seven feet long and weighed 180 pounds. Parker said the cat was fat and in good health "but with an empty stomach."

"The thing that scares me the most was that my four-year-old son could have been playing outside the camper," Parker added.

"It wasn't scared of me whatsoever . . . not in the slightest."

Parker said he might not have bothered shooting a cougar if he had spotted one in the woods previously, but he has different thoughts now. In addition, he had some harsh words for the fish and wildlife branch, which has raised the cougar to the status of a game animal.

Fear-engendered hatred?

Perhaps!

But what do you say too a youngster who wakes up during the drive down-island and says in a sleepy voice:

"Sam is dead. I'll never see Sam again."

Canadiens Spoil Boomer's Return

By Canadian Press
Bernie Geoffrion came home Thursday night and got an unceremonious welcome from Ken Dryden and the Montreal fans who once adored him.

Geoffrion, who still makes his off-season home in the Quebec Metropolis, led Atlanta Flames into the Forum and emerged doused 3-0 by Ken Dryden's second shutout in three games.

The win moved Canadiens atop the National Hockey League East Division standings with five points, one ahead of Buffalo Sabres and Detroit Red Wings, both undefeated in two regular season games.

In other action, New York Islanders, along with Atlanta Kings, 3-2 on Germain Gagnon's goal with 69 seconds left and Philadelphia Flyers were sparked by Simon Nolet's two goals to a 7-4 win over Vancouver Canucks.

Geoffrion spent most of his NHL career blasting in goals for the Canadiens, savoring the accolades of thousands chorusing "Boom-Boom, Boom-Boom" throughout the Montreal arena.

FLAMES SPARK OUT

So it must have been disconcerting that the Flames were mere sparks in absorbing their third straight loss. Dryden made only 22 saves while his team-mates scored once in each period, Rejean Houle's first-period score the winner.

The Canadiens, normally a spirited club, could hardly work up the motions against referee Brian Lewis called only four minor penalties—two to each club.

Islanders' rookie Bill Harris and Bob Erry of Los Angeles had both scored two goals apiece in the mid-hitting game at Nassau County Coliseum, but it remained for Gagnon's unassisted score at 18:51 of the third period to decide the outcome.

The Kings had held 1-0 and 2-1 leads in the game played before 9,427 fans.

Unlike Montreal and New York, the Philadelphia-Vancouver game threatened several times to disburse into mayhem but the only violence of consequence was a third-period brush between Canucks' Wayne Boddy and Gary Dornhoefer of the Flyers. Both received five-minute majors for their efforts.

It remained for Bobby Clarke, the long-haired centre ace whose value soared during the recent Canada-Russia hockey series, to notch the eventual winner at 2:57 of the middle period:

AILMENT NO HANDICAP

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Lee Trevino, his golf getting better as his sore throat got worse, beat fellow United States pro Doug Sanders, 2 and 1, Thursday, an advanced to the semi-finals of the Piccadilly world match-play championship.

"My throat started off scratching and ended up burning," said Trevino, whose game also started off shakily but improved as the match progressed. "The doctor tells me it will stay that way for three or four more days."

While Trevino advanced in his quest for the first prize $20,225, South African Gary Player, the defending champion looking for his fifth Piccadilly title, lost his 36-hole match, 1-up, to a Peter Oosterhuis of England.

In the other two matches, Tom Weiskopf of the U.S. beat David Graham of Australia, 3 and 2, and Tony Jacklin of England trounced American Grier Jones, 7 and 6.

The semi-finals today pit Trevino against Jacklin and Weiskopf against Oosterhuis.

Trevino struggled over the first 14 holes over the 6999-yard, par 74 Wentworth course. But then he birdied three of the last four holes of the first 18 before turning in a hot second 18 that included an eagle 3 on the 18th hole, birdies on the 20th and 25th and a chip shot that he holed from 70 feet on the 31st hole.

"My legs have gone, I'm shattered," said a tired Oosterhuis who held on to beat Player after having built up a five-hole lead over the first half of the match.

"I haven't been involved in match play since 1963 when I was an amateur," said Weiskopf who squared his match with a 35-foot putt for an eagle three on the 12th hole and then went on to beat Graham. "It's inclined to give me the jitters."

British bookies kept Trevino the 7-4 favorite.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

p.m. Royal Victoria Yacht club commodore Archie MacBride and honorary commodore Ned Ashe will be using Ned's sloop Mint as the official vessel.

Pomp and ceremony over, the sailors will spend the rest of the afternoon in some light-hearted pennant racing.

Ted reports that, because of the growing numbers of dinghy sailors, racing has been split into four divisions this season.

Those racing Davidsons — the boat that is the granddaddy of frostbitten — will be in one. Another will be for El Toros. Another division will be for single-handed centreboarders like OK dinghies and the fourth, for two-man centreboarders such as Enterprises, Fireballs and Wayfarers.

Ted reports that the club is clamping down on safety drill this year and Jim Davis is chairman of a special committee on this. Each competitor will have to read and sign a document listing all safety requirements. Knowing Jim, this is one committee that really means business!

In waters off Sidney, boats of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club will be competing in another six-mile Sunday. The start will be 10 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at the foot of Beacon.

Members of the Turkey Head Sailing Association are also getting ready for a day of action Sunday. They'll be sailing two races off Oak Bay Marina, the first beginning at shore Rule section, eating out Jack Woodward's Puff.

John Malleson's Sunday was first PHRF boat, being followed by Hugh Porter's Erigal and John Nelson's Kaya. Peter Hunter, commanding officer of HMCS Cape Breton, has been re-elected commodore of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. Vice-commodore is Tony Goode, skipper of HMCS Chignecto. Rear-commodore is Major Dave Stone and fleet captain, Lieut. Dave Gasser.

The Elk Lake Sailing Association will be choosing new officers next Wednesday. This will take place at 8 p.m. in the CFSA clubhouse on Maplebank Road.

Canuck Golfers Drop to Sixth

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — The United States, the defending champion, increased its lead to 13 strokes after Thursday's second round of the 72-hole women's world amateur golf championship for the Spinto Santo trophy.

The Americans had a total of 285 for the first 36 holes to lead Argentina and Sweden, both at 298. Next came Japan and a British-Irish team, both at 299.

Mary Anne Budke, the U.S. girl who took 78 in Wednesday's first round over the 6,117-yard Hindu Country Club course, led her team Thursday with a par 72. The other two Americans had rounds of 73.

Only the best two scores in each team count towards the total.

Miss Budke's par round was bettered only by Sweden's Liv Wollin, whose 71 helped her team tie with Argentina for second spot.

Few other players were up to form Thursday as play continued in bright sunshine. Canada, placed second after the first round, dropped back to sixth place at 300.

The Canadian upset came when Marlene Streit of Toronto, who scored 68 in the first round and went out in a par 36 Thursday, went one stroke over on the first three holes coming in and finished at 75.

Teammate Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver contributed another 80 while Gayle Borthwick of Toronto, who scored 77 in the first round, went around Thursday in 83.

Lewis Examines 'Bowel Of the Corporate Bum'

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — David Lewis, in his own words, "descended into the bowels of the corporate welfare bum" when he visited an International Nickel Co. of Canada mine here Thursday.

The NDP leader, who has aimed barbs at Inco throughout his election campaign, went down to the 1,100-foot level of the company's Birchtree mine for a first-hand look at an actual ore face.

He made his "bum" comment as he joked during the tour with two Inco officials, who accompanied him. Al Richardson, assistant to the general manager of the Thompson operation, and Keith Somerville, superintendent of the Birchtree mine.

Richardson conceded that it was "good public relations" to let the NDP leader see Inco operations.

As one company spokesman put it, "Can you imagine the flak if we told him to go to hell and wouldn't let him near the plant?"

Prior to his tour, Lewis spent 30 minutes talking with Donald Munn, president and general manager of Inco's Manitoba division.

The NDP leader described the discussion later as amiable. "But he didn't convert me and I didn't convert him."

Lewis said the president argued that depreciation allowances and other considerations are needed by Inco to expand operations and create jobs.

"I told him he wasn't creating jobs out of any philosophical notions, that the jobs were needed to pull the nickel out of the ground and process it."

"He agreed. But it didn't change his view. He still thought mining corporations were entitled to concessions."

... AND SOME SAY GOOD OL' CHARLIE

NEW YORK — A bank guard has been arrested and charged with bilking a blind customer when he helped her make withdrawals.

"Charlie" was always so kind and obliging," said Juliette Silvers of Charles Harper, 32, "though he acted kind of slow and would sometimes say, 'Oh, I forgot to have you sign the slip — sign it here, please.'"

Miss Silvers, with her seeing-eye dog, talked over the situation with officials Thursday after Harper's arrest.

She had discovered, on a day when Harper was not at the bank, that her account had only $169.65 in it instead of the $2,857 the guard had told her was on deposit.

Bank officials say they will make full restitution.

THE TOP OFFENDERS ON HANGOVER LIST

LONDON — There's still no cure to the common hangover, but a British researcher has come up with a new list of drinks most likely to cause one.

Dr. Gaston Pawan used 20 volunteers to study the effects of eight different drinks: red wine, white wine, whisky, rum, gin, vodka, brandy and diluted ethyl alcohol in orange juice.

The results he reported, indicated brandy was the worst offender, followed by red wine, rum and then whisky.

LOS ANGELES — Some $50,000 in plastic trees and plants in rim streets of suburban San Pedro will be replaced with live vegetation — because plastic isn't as durable as the real thing.

BARTOW, Fla. — Charlie Smith, a 130-year-old ex-slave who said he was kidnapped from Liberia in 1854, was invited to return to his African homeland Thursday.

He rejected the offer. "I ain't going nowhere," Smith said.

Man Quizzed Over Letters About PM

KELOWNA — Leonard Saunders, 67, a retired civil servant, said that he was called in to RCMP headquarters for interrogation last week about letters he has written expressing his dislike of Prime Minister Trudeau.

He said an RCMP constable asked him about the letters and questioned him on his intentions in regard to an election campaign visit the Prime Minister is scheduled to make to this Okanagan Valley city Saturday.

Chief Superintendent W. B. Irving of the RCMP's Criminal Investigation Branch, in Victoria, said that Bruce Howard, Liberal candidate seeking re-election in Okanagan-Boundary in the Oct. 30 election, asked the force to interview Saunders.

Irving said the letters contained no actual threats but disturbed Howard.

The officer said the interview was "purely routine" as part of security precautions taken for visits of important persons.

Women, Pollution Steal Show at Candidates Forum

By WALTER MCKINNON
Times Staff

Sparks flew Thursday night when nine of Greater Victoria's 1973 federal election candidates came face-to-face with the Voice of Women.

The meeting, which drew about 85 persons to Victoria High School, began as a typical pre-election forum at which the candidates presented their views and then fielded questions from the audience.

But it changed quickly, when Voice of Women president Mrs. Dorcas Blair decided she didn't like what the candidates were saying.

The meeting was jointly sponsored by the Voice of Women and the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control.

After the initial presentations of the nine, Mrs. Blair stood in the audience and lashed the candidates for what she felt was their condescending attitude to the issues of the Voice of Women. She then demanded and got permission to make a statement, which turned out to be the familiar Voice of Women manifesto and took considerably longer to present than the five minutes each of the candidates had been allotted.

It wasn't a spur-of-the-moment performance — she spoke from a written text she said later was prepared the night before the meeting.

"We hold our governments of the past 15 years — and ourselves — responsible for not only allowing, but encouraging, the present state of affairs in which Canada has not only lost its once-admirable position as arbiter and peace-maker but worse, has become a willing puppet and satellite of the military industrial complex of the U.S.A.," she said.

Esquimalt-Saanich Social Credit candidate John Tisdalle was first to rise to the bait when Mrs. Blair was finished, calling her presentation "the platform of an organization that's running candidates."

Compared with the Voice of Women's presentation, the more formal part of the meeting was rather bland — and predictable fare. The candidates appeared to be skirting the issues which could be expected to draw fire from the biased audience.

Pollution control and protection of the environment were popular topics. Every one of the nine mentioned that issue and they all agreed pollution isn't good. But they had nine different approaches to the problem.

Esquimalt-Saanich New Democratic candidate Roger Smith, a 29-year-old teacher and author, said "without full employment the previous Liberal and Tory governments have ravaged our environment; the Arctic may never recover from attacks upon it, the seas and the rivers are polluted and the soil itself is fouled."

Munro, Esquimalt-Saanich Tory candidate, also stressed environmental control.

One of the most significant developments of the past decade," he said, "is the arrival of an almost-universal awareness of the importance of protecting our environment."

Munro said if elected he will work for upgrading of Canada's marine services and will press for legislation making emergency oil spill equipment mandatory for all vessels entering Canadian waters.

Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich Louis Lindholm went along with the rest on the environment, saying "its deterioration is the most pervasive problem facing the world today."

He said Canada has led the world in realistic pollution control measures under the Liberal administration, and cited legislation passed by the Grits in that area, such as the creation of an environmental ministry. He said the Liberals have consolidated pollution control agencies under one authority to make the campaign for a clean environment more effective.

Esquimalt-Saanich Soerred Tisdalle took a slightly different tack on the issue, working in some basic Social Credit economic theory.

"The greatest pollution today is in the field of financial policies," he said, charging that the "old line parties" have run this nation $44.9 billion into debt and that debt is costing the Canadian taxpayer $6 million a day in interest alone.

Tisdalle also attacked mortgage companies as "the biggest ripoff of all" and suggested a Social Credit government in Ottawa would somehow make possible interest-free mortgages.

Fleming Hansen, Victoria NDP runner, stayed with the environment, lashing out at the Liberals for merely paying lip-service to the pollution problem. He attacked the new department of the environment as just another Ottawa reshuffle.

The Liberals, he said, have failed "even in their limited goal of co-ordinating present policies" on environmental control.

He called for a program placing all environmental legislation under one department, all non-environmental matters in other appropriate departments, a clear-cut catalogue of environmental objectives and a pollution control loan fund for municipalities and industry.

Victoria Conservative candidate Allan McKinnon drew a laugh when he said "if the NDP are not socialists then there is really no distinguishable difference between the NDP and the Liberal party."

The NDP, according to McKinnon, is in the throes of a "political nervous breakdown."

"The people look at the NDP with puzzlement. The NDP are the party that have an identity problem... the NDP candidate for Oak Bay riding in the provincial election said 'State ownership of the means of production, that's the name of the game; that's what I believe in.' Mr. Barrett says 'I will encourage secondary industry' Mr. Lewis says that encouraging industry means that government and industry are holding hands in the taxpayer's pocket—a ripoff," McKinnon said.

He didn't neglect the environment, either. He called for a Bill of Environmental Rights, creation of an environmental council, and amendment to the Canada Water Act to restrict present provisions which allow industrial pollution for a price.

Victoria independent candidate Michael Hallpatch, a 50-year-old city businessman who filed his nomination papers hours before the deadline, provided one of the brightest interludes of the meeting.

He admitted he has no platform and he pointed out how ridiculous it would be for an independent to present one, because if elected, he could never make use of it. Of course, he added, none of the other candidates, if elected, will be able to push their own platforms through Parliament.

"Elect anybody you like," he said. "They'll all be back-benchers."

"If I have a platform," he admitted, "it's probably one of straight bloody-mindedness."

Later, in rebuttal, Hallpatch said there are 164 independents running across Canada. "If you had about 160 independent MPs you would have a government that would bloody well have to listen to you. Try it."

The second independent in Victoria riding, 21-year-old Daniel Hefferman, calls himself a "progressive independent." He didn't present a platform, but he had several questions to ask.

"Why is Canada still shipping arms to the U.S.?"

"Why is Canada still supporting the U.S. war machine?"

"Why is Canada the fifth-largest armaments seller in the world?"

Clifford Stretch, Social Credit candidate in Victoria, opened by acknowledging women.

"The personal rights of women are exactly the same as men," he asserted, before going into his pollution pitch.

Pollution, he said, should be taken care of by The Bank of Canada.

"The federal government must supply the money we need to clean up pollution," he said.

UVic Profs Back Principal

John Downing, professor of education at the University of Victoria, and 14 of his faculty colleagues have written to fired Campbell River school principal John Young expressing their "deep concern and disappointment" at his dismissal.

Young was fired Sept. 8 by Campbell River School Board for misconduct and neglect of duty. A board of reference is hearing Young's appeal.

The educators' letter, sent to Young on Friday, told the controversial principal:

"Social change, educational change, and the needs of people, especially children, require dedicated, forceful, and illuminating leadership such as you have provided."

"By your fine example, you have made an outstanding contribution to the professional development of our students in the faculty of education. We hope that our students, like you, John Young, will be guided by their conscience to do what they believe is right for their students," the letter said.

"Schools exist for students, not for politicians, civil servants, teachers, janitors, or even parents. Your dismissal represents one of the worst cases of denial of the rights of students," the letter continued.

"Your school has been a lighthouse for education not only in this province but throughout Canada and beyond. It would be a black day for education if that light were finally extinguished," the letter said.

"This letter is the collective expression of the personal opinions of the undersigned and is not to be construed as representative of either the faculty of education or the University of Victoria," the letter added.

Downing, who joined the university in 1970 from the London (England) Institute of Education and the University of California, is internationally known for his research into the initial teaching alphabet, a writing system for teaching children to read and write.

Strikers Shun Trucking Offer

DUNCAN — The strike by IWA truck drivers employed by four Vancouver Island firms threatens to cripple the forest industry in this area.

More than 180 Cowichan drivers, employed by Doman's Transport, Hearsey Transport, Bulk Carriers and Quay Transport, walked off their jobs Wednesday morning after giving strike notice three weeks ago.

They already made a more-than-generous offer and "we don't know what they want," says Hearsey's Transport manager Fred Easton. "The offer was over and above the industry raise of 36 1/2 cents an hour."

Thursday morning the drivers voted by secret ballot, 114 to 1, to reject the trucking companies' latest offer. Negotiators for the firms and the IWA recommended acceptance of the contract terms by both parties.

President of the IWA Local 1-80 branch Weldon Jubenville said he and other union officials are prepared to meet for round-the-clock negotiations to try to arrange a satisfactory settlement.

"Truck drivers are entitled to the same benefits as negotiated for other IWA members in the forest industry and there is not a reason in the world every employee affected by the strike can't be back on the job Monday morning. That is if the companies are prepared to negotiate in good faith."

Drivers are asking for an additional 3 per cent over the 36 1/2 cents an hour wage increase negotiated by the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations along with several changes in the contract wordage.

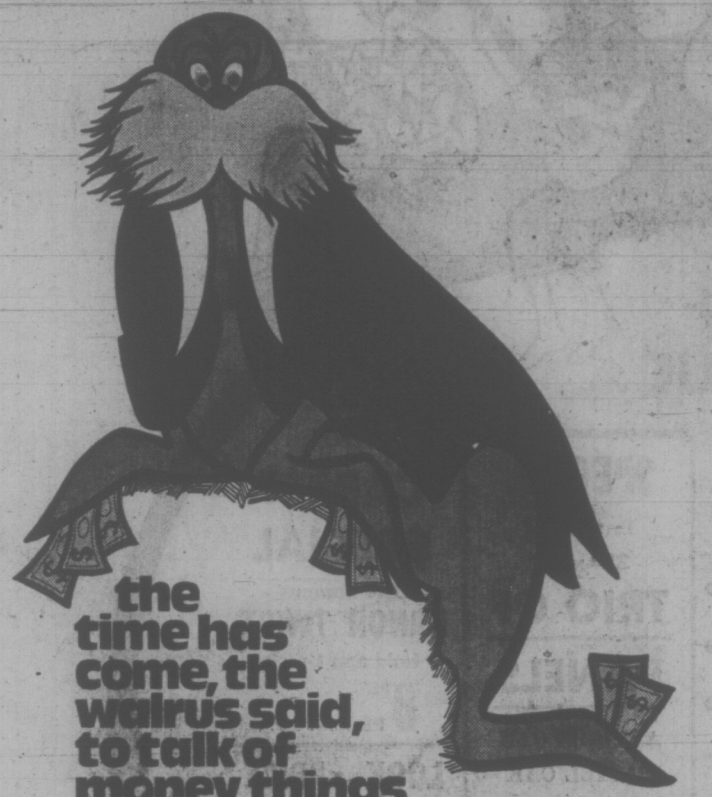

Jubenville said all truck drivers in the logging industry have received the additional 3 per cent and the union wants this to apply also to the truck drivers employed by the four companies.

Heath's Asian Policy Wins Party Nod

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath won support Thursday in the face of demands by maverick right-winger Enoch Powell for a ban on non-white immigration.

A dramatic confrontation focusing on the plight of thousands of Asians expelled from Uganda ended with the annual convention of the Conservative party endorsing Heath's policy of admitting the immigrants to Britain.

Powell's call for a total cut-off of immigration from Uganda and other Commonwealth countries was rejected decisively after a stormy debate.

Behind that clash, however, lay a deeper feud between Heath and Powell, his former ministerial colleague, on a variety of issues from defence to British membership in the European Common Market.

Amid scenes of almost unprecedented anger at a Conservative conference, Powell at one point accused Heath and his ministers of breaking their electoral promises and of lying to British voters.

Confusion surrounded the ballot by 4,000 men and women delegates. On a show of hands, an anti-Powell resolution was declared carried "almost overwhelmingly," but then a written ballot was demanded.

It yielded a 1,721 to 736 count in favor of Heath's stance, or a margin of about 5 to 2. There was no explanation of what had happened to the votes of the 1,500 or so other delegates.

Powell spoke for a motion calling on the Heath government to fulfill what Powell said was its 1970 election pledge to ban virtually all new immigration.

But Heath's men, vowing they are fulfilling their commitment, added an amendment congratulating the government "on its swift action to accept responsibility for the Asian refugees from Uganda."

Instant Action From New Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — A new warship that can be readied for sea duty in minutes sailed up Halifax harbor Thursday to join Canada's Atlantic fleet.

The 4,600-ton helicopter-carrying destroyer Athabaskan, newest Canadian fighting ship and second in the new DDH-280 class series, is so sophisticated that much of the work traditionally handled in the engine room and elsewhere can be done by fingertips from the bridge.

One of the ships that met the Athabaskan off the mouth of Halifax harbor was the Iroquois, first ship in the series, under Cmdr. Darrock MacGillivray who said the $60-million ship features "rapid response which is so essential."

The remaining two destroyers in the class — Huron and Algonquin are scheduled for delivery next year.

"I think the most significant departure has been from steam to gas turbine engines," says Cmdr. MacGillivray. The Iroquois was believed the first ship of its size anywhere to use gas turbines exclusively.

"It gives you not instant starts, but very quick starts in the sense that you don't need half a day to prepare. Under ideal circumstances, I can virtually sail the ship in 15 minutes notice."

"We've automated the machinery control to the degree where I have direct control of the engines from the bridge by the use of throttles."

GROUND RULES SET OUT FOR MAILING

OTTAWA (CP) — The development of a set of standards designed to ease mechanized sorting of mail was announced Thursday by the post office.

The public will not be expected to comply with many of the standards apart from using the postal code and placing it in the last line of the address, a spokesman said.

The standards are aimed primarily at businesses. The standards, which will apply to physical characteristics such as size, shape and weight of envelopes as well as placement of addresses, postal codes and stamps in the preparation of letters for mailing, will become mandatory by Oct. 1, 1973.

EXTRA TERM FOR KILLER HUNTER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A hunter who thought a boat carrying three men was a moose and shot at it, killing one of the men, was given an additional six-month jail term Thursday after the Crown appealed an original three-month sentence in the case.

Laverne Weber, 45, of Prince George, was found guilty earlier this year of criminal negligence in the death of a man on Crooked River in central British Columbia Sept. 26 last year.

Mr. Justice A. B. Robertson of the B.C. Appeals Court said some hunters "are worse than merely careless, they are downright reckless — if something moves, shoot it."

"This case seems to be an unfortunate example of the kind of total disregard for the rights and safety of others found among some hunters."

"When the respondent saw the boat and thought it was a moose he cannot have taken any precautions to confirm his first impression before he fired."

He said the range was 365 yards when Weber fired two shots at the boat. The first killed one man and injured a second, the second shot missed, he said.

Finances Trouble Entertainment Showcase

NEW YORK (AP) — After a two-day intermission, Radio City Music Hall will reopen Saturday for at least one week while management and the musicians' union attempt to resolve their contract differences.

The sudden closing of the midtown entertainment landmark, home of the Rockettes, dismayed New Yorkers and tourists alike and prompted Mayor John Lindsay to call in a state mediator.

More worrisome, however, were hints that the famed movie showcase might never reopen because of growing economic problems caused by rising costs and declining attendance.

Thursday, however, Vincent McDonnell, chairman of the state mediation board, announced the agreement for a one-week trial period to resolve the contract dispute based on orchestra size.

Management has agreed to raise the musicians' $268.75 weekly salary by $16.25 while trying to eliminate 21 pit jobs through attrition. Rejection of the latter led to the closing announcement Wednesday night.

The 40-year-old theatre, never before closed, has played host to an estimated 230 million visitors over the years. Its Christmas and Easter shows draw thousands but only 300 of the 6,200 seats in the theatre were occupied for the final show Wednesday night.

Theft Cancels Lightfoot Show

WINNIPEG, Man. (AP) — The show has been cancelled because of the theft of musical and amplification equipment belonging to Canadian folk singer Gordon Lightfoot, forcing him to cancel a concert at Central Michigan University.

Richard Harrison, Lightfoot's road manager, said the equipment, including the performer's favorite 12-string guitar, was apparently taken from a motel.

He offered a $500 reward for return of the equipment. The radio station at the college, which sponsored the event, said it would refund money to about 3,000 people who had purchased tickets.

Lightfoot refused to perform with equipment other than his own.

U.S. FORCES OFFER 'KILLING' BONUSES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives has approved a system of bonuses, ranging up to $17,000, to attract persons with needed skills for an all-volunteer U.S. military.

A military bonus bill was approved by a vote of 337 to 35 and now goes to the Senate. One of the House opponents, Representative Bertram Poth (Dem., N.Y.), called it a "killers-for-hire bill."

Minister Fined

MAIDENHEAD, England (AP) — Aerospace Minister Michael Heseltine was fined £20 (about $48) Wednesday for driving at 100 miles an hour on the motorway he inaugurated last December.

Congress previously had approved a bonus of $3,000 to attract combat personnel. The new House bill extends the bonus to persons with any other needed skills.

GARDENING
hilda beastallDon't Wait for Spring:
Move Some Plants Now

It would be nice to make this a lucky day for gardeners by giving a complete list of plants which can be put into gardens now.

Alphabetically arranged, the list would contain everything capable of doing well here; all the gardeners need do, would be to look for the plant in mind to see whether to rush outside to do the job or to wait until spring.

No such luck for today—obviously such a list is impossible. The nearest is to give groups of the various kinds, hoping you will apply your own knowledge of plants to decide on action.

Before the end of October, herbaceous perennials can be moved within a garden; purchased and planted; or lifted for division and replanted. The exception among the perennials is the group having fleshy rootstocks such as Kniphofia (Red-hot-poker), Monarda, Eremurus, Iris.

In our wet winter soils, these may succumb before making new root systems. If it is a matter of transferring only, with a complete rootball even these can be moved now within a garden.

The so-called "small fruits" and "cane fruits" are planted as soon as their leaves fall. Raspberries, currants, blueberries, grapes are in this class. They will make an earlier start next spring without a set-back which would result if you waited until April or even May for planting stocks to arrive.

Flowering shrubs which lose their leaves in fall respond better with spring growth if put into your garden during October. This applies when the shrubs are specimens for shrub borders or when grown as hedge material.

Small sizes sold in containers, can be planted at any time that the soil is not soggy wet or frozen. Larger sizes dug from nursery rows with a soil ball, do well from an October planting.

Roses are flowering shrubs too, and there is no doubt that you get a better showing the first summer from fall plantings.

Other flowering shrubs are those with evergreen leaves. Most of these bloom in the period from late March to early June. The flower buds are formed and visible now, and since the leaves are evergreen the plants are never totally dormant.

Only those grown and sold in containers should be planted by beginner-gardeners in fall. Nursery stock grown in rows and lifted with a soil ball carefully wrapped, will rarely lose a bud; but it depends on your care in planting and handling and later care.

In this last group are rhododendrons (including azaleas), camellias, pieris, skimmias, photinias, leucothoes—the choice plants which make our coastal gardens different from others.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer committed a mechanical error in his play, and thereby lost a game contract that he should have fulfilled. Can you find South's mistake?

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1♣ 1♥ 1♠ Pass
 1NT Pass 3NT Pass
 Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

After West's queen of diamonds was permitted to win the opening lead, West continued with the diamond jack, dummy's king taking the trick. The three of clubs was then led to South's ace (West's jack falling), after which the eight of spades was led. When West followed with the four-spot, dummy's six was played. East won the trick with the jack, and continued the attack on the diamond suit, the board's ace winning the trick.

The four of clubs was now played to South's king. West discarding a heart. The ten of spades came next. West perforce covered with the queen, and dummy cashed three spade tricks. Now came the nine of clubs; East played low — and declarer was "stuck." If he played his eight of clubs, the nine would win, but South then couldn't get back to his own hand to cash the club queen. And if he overtook the nine with the queen, East's ten of clubs would become the highest-ranking club left in the deck.

And so declarer ended up making three spade tricks, two diamonds, and three clubs, to incur a one-trick defeat. That was his mistake?

Declarer's error came early in the play, when to the second club lead of dummy he led the four of clubs. With West's jack having dropped on the initial club lead, declarer should have recognized that the jack might well have been a singleton.

On the second club lead declarer should have led dummy's nine of clubs to his king. West would discard a heart. After the board's three spades had been cashed, declarer would then play the four of clubs, East following suit with a low club. It would now be a routine matter for declarer to win the trick with his own eight of clubs, finessing against East's marked ten of clubs.

Thus, by "unblocking" with dummy's nine of clubs on the second club lead, declarer would pave the way for the making of four club tricks, and his contract.

Sam was checking his money. "I've spent just a third of what I had on me, but I've still got about twelve bucks in all," he declared. "Let's have a drink."

"Okay, dear," replied his wife, taking two dimes from his coins on the table. "But I'll make a couple of quick calls first."

"You do that," Sam smiled. "Now I've got left exactly twice as much in coins, but half as much in bills, as I had when we left home today."

How much had he spent?

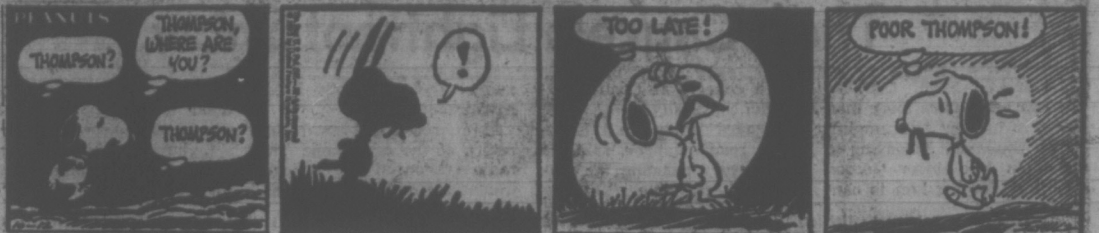

(Answer Monday)
 Yesterday's answer: TIGERS was 316045.

Multi-Millionaire Dream Drove Calgary Kidnapper

CALGARY (CP) — One of two Calgary men who was sentenced Thursday to 15 years imprisonment said his one goal in life was to become "not just a millionaire but a multi-millionaire."

Donald Wayne Matheson, 27, made the statement in an address in district court before Judge F. H. Quigley before he and Louis Salo, 28, received the sentences. Both admitted kidnapping a millionaire's daughter and holding her for ransom.

Court was also told that Salo, who didn't speak on his behalf, had acquired a $40,000 business debt, which was one part in the kidnapping.

They pleaded guilty last Friday to kidnapping with intent to hold for ransom and earlier waived preliminary hearing.

Maximum penalty for the offence is life imprisonment.

They were arrested after Marlene Hashman, 17, was abducted from her home Aug. 10 and held 14 hours until her father, construction executive Sam Hashman, paid $500,000 in ransom. She was released unharmed and the money was recovered.

Matheson, who worked for a stockbroker, was charged shortly after the kidnapping and Salo, a heavy equipment operator, was arrested about 10 days later.

A third Calgary man charged in the case, Michael Matheny, 27, has been committed for trial in Alberta Supreme Court.

A date for the trial of Matheny, also a stockbroker, has yet to be set.

The kidnapping set off one of the largest manhunts in the city's history.

The search began after Hashman followed telephoned instructions, depositing the money in a parking garage and police were certain the girl was safe.

She had been kept bound and gagged in a townhouse garage near the edge of the city.

CNR 'Responsible'

EDMONTON (CP) — The CNR should accept "full financial responsibility" for rebuilding 37 miles of the Alberta Resources Railway washed out in June flooding, Opposition Leader Harry Strom said Thursday.

Strom told a news conference the Conservative government of Alberta has shown a "marked reluctance" to press the CNR to make repairs estimated at $12 million for the washed-out section of track between Grande Cache and Grande Prairie.

tives Project funds funneled through the city for proper administration was passed at Wednesday's finance and budget committee meeting.

It was approved following a recommendation from Mayor Rod Sykes who said provincial Environment Minister Bill Yurko doesn't care what happens to the federal grants after they have been issued to Alberta. As an example, the mayor said, one $10,000 LIP grant was handed to a person representing a Calgary group and the person used the money for purposes other than for what the grant had intended.

Coliseum Approved

EDMONTON (CP) — A design for a circular coliseum seating 16,000 for hockey games has been accepted by the Edmonton Exhibition Association and tenders are to be called for in January.

The announcement Thursday by the association said the coliseum, which could be expanded later to seat 20,000, will be the height of a 10-storey building and cost between $9 million and $10 million. It is designed mainly to house Edmonton's entry in the new World Hockey Association.

Local 'Boutique TV' Could It Happen Here?

Being some selected items from a man's personal diary:

Item: All manner of reports from Toronto this week hailing the birth of CITY-TV, which describes itself as "the world's first genuine local-television station" and I wonder how long it will be, if ever, before Victoria will have something like it.

Sandy Ross, of the Star, writes that the new station has just the right blend of casualness and authority, that there's no "me-big-communicator; you-audience" feel about the programming. Some programs are rejected by the networks as too "adult." The CBC's controversial Casanova series, for example, began as CITY's opening night attraction, bare bottoms and all.

CHEK-TV, the single Victoria television station, though it makes very little effort toward a local identity, could certainly profit by studying the Toronto example. Advertising commitments, for one thing, are coming in twice as fast as the Toronto station hoped.

Sandy writes: "If CITY wins its gamble, it will probably be the first of dozens of such boutique TV stations across North America. More fresh ideas were introduced to the industry in a single evening's programming than the networks have produced in the past several years. I think CITY-TV will succeed in demolishing those dreadful, sober-faced barriers that have always existed in television between performers and audience. If they do, it could be a major development in the way the mass media evolves on this continent."

Local television has everything going for it that local newspapers have, could develop an intimate rapport with its viewers as well as getting away with programs considered too advanced or of special interest by the networks.

Item: A visit today from suave Ron Worley, the former deputy minister of travel, he being miffed by an anecdote titled "The Night Mr. Worley Produced His Trophy." The "trophy" was Premier Bennett. I had recalled seeing the gentlemen on a TV talk show in Palm Springs hosted by Don Wilson. Worley had used the occasion to speak almost entirely about his book, "The Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett". I had wondered if this was done at the taxpayers' expense.

Not so, says Worley. "At the time of the taping," says he, "Mr. Bennett and I were vacationing in Palm Springs at our own expense. You inferred that I had been billed by Don Wilson as being on his program to promote British Columbia. This was not the case. Don Wilson and I always get together when I am in Palm Springs and he invited me to appear on his program to talk about the book. There was never any mention that I would promote British Columbia at that time."

Item: A brief, but pleasant visit with Pierre Berton, he being here to autograph another long ton of his books, and he tells me that no statement of his in the past has aroused such controversy as his offhand reply to an interviewer who'd asked him about his last will and testament.

Berton's decision, it seems, is that the bulk of his considerable estate, including the rolling acreage and rambling home at Kleinberg, north of Toronto, will be left as a foundation for the encouragement of struggling young writers.

His seven children will be more or less cut off, in line with Berton's philosophy that happiness and success are nothing if they're not earned, as he earned them himself.

Oddly enough, the people who oppose this concept most violently are people of means, earned or inherited, who are so often obsessed with the financial security of their kids.

In that narrower sense, I suppose, Berton is demonstrating a confidence in the future of the country and its inheriting generation that's not shared by others who have made their fortunes from it.

Poor Methods Blamed For Millstream Blaze

A research project into the causes and methods of fighting the Millstream landfill fire has concluded the blaze began because dump materials were not segregated and proper covering methods were not used.

A. J. Chmelauskas, co-ordinator of the Pollution Control Board project, said today the research report, to be published once the fire is extinguished, will recommend cellular construction for all landfills in the province.

Dumps should be compartmentalized into cells of different materials, he said, so that if fires break out they will be contained in one section.

Such cells should not be more than 12 feet deep, he added, and should be covered by one to two feet of well-compacted, impervious cover material.

Chmelauskas said the Millstream fire, which originally covered a 40-acre area of the dump, should be extinguished by the end of October.

A back hoe is now digging out the remaining "hot spots" at the dump, such as stumps and logs, pushing them into a large hole where they are being burnt off, and burying any hot pieces of metal.

"Once the hot spots are put out," Chmelauskas said, "we'll drench the rest of the

ARSON BLAMED IN HOUSE FIRE

Arson was the cause of a fire at 724 Pine which did $1,500 damage Thursday night.

Victoria firemen arrived at the vacant house shortly after 10 p.m. and found three fires inside and three piles of luggage ready to be ignited, deputy chief R. J. Coates said today.

A neighbor said he had seen some "young boys" playing around the house earlier in the evening.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It was a strange breakfast. Tea spiked with cherries helped wash down mounds of cabbage and carrot salad that wafted hot fumes of spices from the eaters' mouths, husky Russian bread and plates of candies and cookies.

If the fare was unusual so was the setting — the officers' dining room aboard a Russian fish factory ship, alongside at Ogden Point to unsnarl nets caught in her propeller when a winch jammed.

Conversation wasn't exactly sparking this morning as we dined aboard the Tekhnolog.

There was a language barrier. None of the 100 men aboard spoke English and Russian isn't a normal second language for westerners.

We tried a dictionary — too slow. The accommodating first officer, Victor Petrenko used the ship-to-shore phone. Within minutes a car drew up at the jetty. In it was Fred Ratniuk, of 2525 Garden, who has lived in Canada for 31 years.

With Ratniuk on hand things went better.

We talked of the Russian-Canadian hockey series. How did they like it?

We were told they liked the hockey — not the fighting. We told them, through Ratniuk, we felt the same way.

The radio officer came in, sat down and began eating. He, unlike his shipmates, had a modish longish haircut.

His name, we were told, is Vladimir Wacalaga. We were assured that there were no hippies in Russia but some people — even scientists — wore their hair as long as Wacalaga.

In a blue track suit, flashing a gold tooth as he smiled, the ship's doctor notices our eyes on the framed pictures. He tells us they're all of Lenin and Karl Marx.

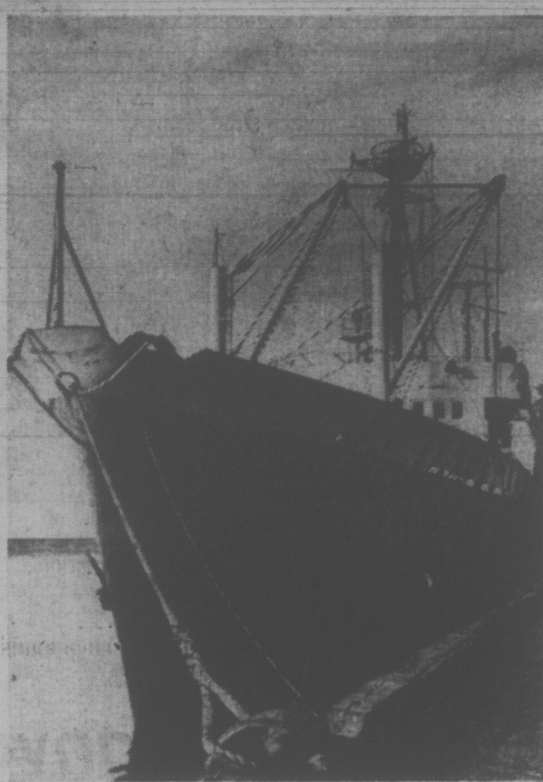

How did they manage to get permission to come in to Victoria to free their propeller when they can't speak English?

We were told this was done through their embassy in Ottawa.

The ship's dog comes in and makes embarrassing sniffs at our legs. The officers smile, a little abashed.

We try to lighten this situation by asking his name. We're told it's the equivalent of Ball, because he's a rolly-polly. His manners are excused — they say he's only five months old.

We change the subject again. We've noticed the television set and the movie projector. What else do they do in their spare time when at sea?

RUSSIAN factory ship Tekhnolog waits for the tide to head out to the high seas again.

We're told they play checkers and there's all sorts of small musical instruments aboard — violins, mandolins and accordions.

We're told that there are five women aboard, working in the kitchen and making beds.

One of them, Lena Egorova is 27 today. She's brought on deck to have a birthday picture taken with the others.

In spite of the language difficulty, they answer questions frankly until we begin to ask what fish they catch and process.

One of the younger officers starts speaking when we ask if they ever bring aboard salmon.

The doctor firmly halts the conversation, mentioning one word, over and over again.

We keep asking what type of fish? Finally, Ratniuk says it's a fish he's never heard of. We drop the subject.

We find that the ship is out from May until January. Her home port is Petropavlovsk on the Kamchatka Peninsula, directly across from the Aleutian Islands on the map.

Where did she get propeller trouble?

Here, again, the answers are careful. We're told it was in neutral waters, they don't quite know where.

As if to compensate for the lack of answers, the doctor hands out small packages of Russian chocolate as we leave.

Saanich Firehall Talks Set

Discussions leading to a new Saanich firehall serving University of Victoria campus and the Cambro Bay-Ten Mile Point area are expected to take place early next month.

Council's fire committee chairman Ald. William Noel said the committee, fire chief Harold Gains, Mayor Hugh Curtis and administrator John Tribe will meet Uvic dean of administration Trevor Matthews to discuss the proposal.

Saanich council has expressed the hope that Uvic will co-operate with Saanich in siting a fire station to mutual advantage of the university and the surrounding community.

The Victoria Labor Council is asking B.C. Trade and Industry Minister Alex Macdonald for a meeting to discuss "the abandonment of Victoria by industry" and its effect on jobs.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said today there is concern about "the gradual erosion of industrial activity in this city."

He points to current uncertainty about the future of the Bapeco paint factory on Belleville Street where 200 people work.

"The company is keeping it a great secret," said Ryan. "We are very anxious to know what the situation is. If it is a fait accompli, then the services of Canada Manpower should be put to work immediately, and get some retraining set up."

"There is a feeling that the company will move to Vancouver."

Company officials confirmed in August that a number of options are under consideration, but declined comment on persistent rumors of a move to Vancouver.

Ryan said the labor council is not opposed to "recovery of land on the waterfront that environmentalists talk about" but that Bapeco should relocate in Greater Victoria.

Asked about the industrial decline of Victoria, Ryan pointed to the closure of Victoria Machinery Depot shipyard, closure of some major bakeries and fears of other plants moving, such as B.C. Forest Products, the biggest private employer in the area.

While there wasn't been anything definite about BCFP, Ryan said there has always been "a feeling it may be moved. There is always fear. The climate is not really settled or stable."

City's Industry 'Eroding'

FIRST ABORTIONS AT VGH

The first therapeutic abortions undertaken at Victoria General Hospital were performed today although the senior administrator declined to say how many.

John Murray, acting executive director, said Thursday he did not think the number any more relevant than the number of appendectomies or any other operations performed for the day.

No abortions were performed at the former St. Joseph's Hospital, founded by the Sisters of St. Ann 96 years ago, because the Catholic Church opposes the operation. But the hospital was turned over to a public society last February.

Since the law authorizing abortions was liberalized three years ago, Royal Jubilee Hospital has been carrying the climbing workload. There were 51 approvals for abortion operations at Jubilee last month.

Murray said earlier that the board of directors had decided it did not have the moral right to refuse the use of a public acute general hospital for any legitimate medical procedure performed by a qualified physician.

Thursday he said that from a recent survey he understands almost every accredited non-denominational hospital in British Columbia is now performing abortions provided they have the qualified medical staff and facilities.

Speed-Up for Three Projects

The chairman of the capital regional hospital board said today Health Minister Dennis Gocke has given his blessing to three special hospital projects pending clarification of firm costs.

Art Young, who along with representatives from the region's advisory board, met with Gocke and some of his advisors Thursday afternoon, said the projects are the open heart surgery unit being developed at Royal Jubilee Hospital, expansion of the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital and physiotherapy and kitchen additions at Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island.

What the regional representatives wanted was provincial authority to borrow $215,000 beyond the limits approved by referendum four years ago so the projects, seen as crucial, can proceed right away.

Young said Gocke indicated if the projects are important enough to be done before the next referendum, he will recommend them to the treasury board. The health minister wanted specific cost figures, said Young.

The regional hospital representatives got an excellent reception from the new health minister at their first meeting, Young said.

They also got an indication Gocke has no objection to the referendum the regional hospital board wants to hold next March.

The referendum will seek public approval to borrow for renovation and expansion of regional acute care hospitals.

Young said that Gocke suggested the referendum cover plans for a shorter period, four to five years rather than up to seven years. That means the referendum will likely be for $18 million to $22.5 million.

The province pays 60 per cent of building costs with regional ratepayers paying the balance through long-term borrowing.

Beer Garden on Parkland Rapped by Church Board

Spokesmen for St. Aidan's United Church congregation are protesting the sale of beer last June in a Saanich park on behalf of amateur sports groups.

Objection to a Sportsarama beer garden is contained in a letter to Saanich council from J. F. Ritz, clerk of session, of St. Aidan's, 1691 Broadmead, situated one mile south of Lambrick Park where the sports day was held.

About 400 dozen beer were sold at the event, which took place on a weekend when weather was sunny and warm.

Rev. J. R. Allan, minister of St. Aidan's, said he supported the view taken by the board of session, which was opposed to the principle of drinking in a public place in the vicinity of children.

He disliked the idea of beer sales to support children's sports, particularly with families and children present.

The minister said it was his personal view that "there should be better ways of doing it."

There may be a loophole in the law to permit this, but I regret it," Rev. Allan said. Saanich council gave permission for the Sportsarama — a list of its kind in Saanich — which was organized to provide financing for amateur athletic travel expenses when teams were participating in competitive events away from home.

Parks administrator Bert Richmond observed recently the beer garden was a particularly successful aspect of the program.

The beer garden was situated in a former barn on the Lambrick estate which has been converted to an auditorium and dressing rooms using contributions from Victoria and District Baseball Association.

Aldermen are expected to discuss the church protest at a meeting of council Monday night.

Emergency B.C. Grants

Education Minister Eileen Daily today announced emergency grants of $33,787 to Sooke school district for the hiring of three teachers and $4,000 to the Saanich Peninsula school district for resource materials.

The two districts, along with 26 other districts in the province, will be allowed to overspend their 1972 budgets in order to correct undesirable learning situations, the minister said.

Hospital Talks to Reopen

Twenty-eight women employees of the hospital have been on strike since Sept. 30, 1970, in an attempt to negotiate their first collective agreement.

"This is a distinct improvement over the situation that has existed for over two years and I hope that the people are ready to bargain in good faith and are anxious to resolve the dispute," King said.

He attributed the breakthrough in the dispute to his own powers of persuasion and "maybe just a general desire by both parties to get back to the bargaining table."

"There are a number of attitudes that have been held that were discussed and I think perhaps a more reasonable attitude was taken by the two parties," King said.

The minister said he expects some results from the negotiations "in a matter of weeks" and said he is optimistic the dispute can be satisfactorily settled by that time.

The dispute has been going on at the hospital since May of 1970 when employees at Sandringham applied for certification and then filed a complaint on behalf of two employees alleging unfair labor practices.

The union was certified and applied for a meeting with management to negotiate a collective agreement.

When no agreement was reached, a mediation officer was appointed, but with no further results.

On Feb. 16, 1972, the Labor Relations Board ruled, after a hearing, that the hospital was not and had not bargained collectively with the union. The decision was appealed but the same results were found.

Labor Minister William King has convinced the owners of Sandringham Private Hospital Ltd. to go back to the bargaining table and hammer out a settlement with 28 striking employees.

King Thursday said negotiations between the two parties will start Oct. 26.

King's announcement followed a morning meeting with Russell Shepherd, co-owner of the hospital.

The labor minister said Shepherd has agreed to meet personally with union representatives and start collective bargaining.

DES TESTS SECRET

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agriculture department has wrapped a blanket of secrecy around feedlot tests designed to show whether a cancer-causing growth hormone is showing up in beef.

Specifically, the tests are to determine whether the chemical growth hormone DES can be used safely. In the test, DES pellets are implanted in the ears of cattle.

Dr. E. R. Goode of the agricultural research service says no information will be released until after all tests are completed, probably in January.

"I think this is required to present a complete picture of what one can expect as the result of experimentation along the design we have come up with," Goode told a reporter.

The Senate has passed a bill which orders a complete ban of DES — diethylstilbestrol — on Jan. 1 unless tests prove implantation does not leave chemical residues in the tissues of slaughtered animals.

The hormone, used as a feedlot growth stimulant for many years, has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals when fed in large doses. Federal regulations prohibit it in human food.

Livestock producers use DES mostly as a feed additive, a method considered faster and cheaper than implanting pellets which are gradually absorbed into the animals' systems.

The Food and Drug Administration has ordered DES banned from livestock feed as of next Jan. 1, but has left open the question of implanted pellets.

Crackdowns on DES feeding came after federal meat inspectors found traces of the chemical in livers of some cattle and sheep. None has been reported in the muscle tissue or red meat of animals.

YOUNG MATHEW FRIEND, 4, found he was able to open his own fall training camp this week when below-freezing temperatures turned a puddle into a skating rink outside his home in Ottawa. Mathew thinks he has yet to put himself in top playing condition. He says his favorite club is Team Canada and that he doesn't like the Russians.

Reason? Eleanor Whitlock

Mrs. Whitlock is no novice

This time, however, she was who are responsible for assembling their own canvassers.

"If team captains cannot fill their quotas, then we do our best to find people for them," Eleanor Whitlock explains.

This year "it would be perfect" if there could be 3,200 canvassers, for the residential division.

Today, she has some 2,900 lined up. "Another three hundred would make it so much easier for everyone."

Speaking of those who have already volunteered, she added with some pride that they cover all age groups.
Some are in their 70s.

Source of great pride is the fact that this year a team from the CNIB has volunteered with their director
Miss Isabel Beveridge.

"Each one on the team will be accompanied by a sighted person during the canvass."

Teams have come forward from church groups, from schools and service clubs and from Job's Daughters.
Hundreds of individuals have also volunteered.

Usually a team is made up of 20 canvassers. Mrs. Whitlock told me. "We try to keep calls for each of these canvassers down to 20 houses... but this can only be done if we get our full quota of volunteers."

In keeping calls to a minimum it gives canvassers time to make one call-back. "This is important if we are to hit — and hopefully exceed — our target. This year it's $140,000."

Well, there you have it!
Eleanor Whitlock is ready.
Her subdivision and area chairmen are on their mark.
Team captains are at the alert and 2,900 canvassers are toeing the starting line.

Give a Smile

Come Monday it will be up to you. Meet these people with a smile when they knock on your door. Welcome them cor-

And remember, as you do, you are helping others...
many others.

If by any chance you could spare a few hours during the next few weeks, there is still time to help bring that quota of canvassers up to 3,200.

Mothers, Tots Take a Break

No matter how much a mother may love her pre-school child, the routine involved in his care can be monotonous and, at times, seem worse than a prison sentence. A prisoner can at least look forward to time off for good behavior.

In the past, relatives shared part of her burden, but the young family of today is often isolated in a strange community. Sociologists refer to it as the "nuclear family."

Needs a Break

The father makes friends at the office, but the mother with a pre-schooler and no money for babysitters has little opportunity to mingle with friends.

Dr. John Wood, director of the Saanich mental health centre, says there's "no question" that mothers of young children need a break.

He would like to see the community develop some form of co-operative day care where mothers could take turns caring for children two or three days a week and have the remaining days off.

Dr. Wood believes such centres would help children as much as mothers because "people take their frustrations out on the weakest person around."

Kathleen Ruff, president of the Status of Women Action Group, thinks women who devote 100 per cent of their time to their families are "really developing selfish" children and husbands.

Mrs. Ruff believes many women are frustrated because they are limited to a round of "mindless chores" in the home. She thinks both mothers and children benefit from a break in routine.

She pointed out that children are supposed to become less dependent on the mother as they grow older and need a chance to mingle with other children their own age.

She suggests mothers take turns minding three or four children one day a week.

"The children enjoy playing with someone else's toys and the mother can count on a day to herself," Mrs. Ruff said.

Mrs. Ruff leaves her children — Andrew, 4, and Simone, 7 months — with a friend one day a week and does her stint as group mother in return. She takes the children along when she attends swim and trim classes at Gordon Head Community Centre Pool because babysitting is available.

Victoria's YM-YWCA has babysitting and kindergarten facilities Tuesdays and Thursdays for infants and preschoolers. Mother must be enrolled in one of a wide variety of courses offered by the Y's women's program.

Kindergarten fees are $12.00 for 10 weeks (the length of most courses). Babysitting for the same period costs $6.00, but infants are limited to two hours a session. Kindergarten children bring a lunch and stay from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Free Yoga

Mothers who can't afford child care fees can join community groups offering free babysitting. For example, Corner Stone, a Local Initiative Project, operating out of St. David's Anglican Church, offers free yoga lessons every Wednesday afternoon.

Mothers taking part claim they look forward to this break in routine. Mrs. Joan Lawrence, one of the participants, says the weekly sessions are her first chance to get out of the house in years. Her home is in an isolated area and Mrs. Lawrence doesn't drive. Corner Stone provides transportation anywhere within a five-mile radius of the church.

She wishes a service like Corner Stone had been available when her boys, now 7 and 9 years of age, were younger.

The mothers taking the yoga course all have school-age children and don't need the available babysitting service.

The Chateaufort, a group sponsored by the Canadian Mental Health Association, meet every Wednesday morning, at 1452 Elford Street.

Public health nurse Nita Davidson says the group is designed to help "women who have been stuck with the kids too long."

The members plan their own program which includes guest speakers, discussion groups and tours. Babysitting is available, free of charge.

The Oak Bay Women's Discussion Group, now in its second year, is designed to get women out of the house and away from the children a few hours a week.

Members pay 50 cents weekly or $1.75 for four weeks. This covers the cost of babysitters and gifts for guest speakers. Meetings are held Tuesday mornings, at 9:45 a.m., in Windsor Park Pavilion.

Fill Need

According to Need volunteer Bobbi Etter, groups that give women a chance to get out of the house and share their problems fill a real need in the community.

She says Need, a line for people in emotional crisis, receives many calls from mothers suffering from overexposure to homes and children.

"It's particularly bad at this time of year when navy husbands are away on a four-month cruise and wives are left alone with small children," Mrs. Etter said.

Corner Stone offers free yoga lessons, babysitting

Sex Myths Dispelled At First SWAG Talk

A local doctor tried to dispel some of the myths about sex at a discussion group held for women Thursday in the YM-YWCA.

Dr. Barbara Baxter used the theories of U.S. researchers Masters and Johnson to explain female sexuality to the 35 women who attended the noon meeting.

Each man and woman experiences four phases during intercourse — excitement, plateau, orgasm and resolution — according to Masters and Johnson, Dr. Baxter said.

"Due to cultural influences female orgasm has been retarded in the past," said Dr. Baxter.

The passive role women have played in our culture meant that a couple's sex life was determined by the husband's needs, she said. All sexual foreplay ended when the couple got married, and after intercourse the couple returned to their separate sides of the bed.

People over 60 were expected to be "gender neuter", with no sex life, said Dr. Baxter.

Achieving orgasm shouldn't be a problem for a woman if she and her partner care for each other, Dr. Baxter said.

"If she and her partner don't worry about it, then her orgasm will come," she said.

"The resolution phase can be the most meaningful for a couple," said Dr. Baxter. This period after orgasm gives the couple a time to really communicate, she said.

A woman can have only one kind of orgasm, not different kinds, as has been maintained by some women's liberation groups, said Dr. Baxter.

However, a woman is capable of having multiple orgasms during one sexual cycle, unlike a man, she said. A man has a period of remission after intercourse during which he is impotent.

Dr. Baxter discussed and showed examples of different kinds of contraceptives to her audience. She criticized the rhythm method of contraception as being risky and difficult to practise. Women using the rhythm method still have a 25 per cent chance of pregnancy, she said.

The intra-uterine device (IUD) cuts chances of pregnancy to anywhere from one to seven per cent, Dr. Baxter said. However, 11 per cent of women wearing the IUD expect the device with their period.

Another 11 per cent will suffer too much cramping and bleeding from the device during their period to continue using it, she said.

The pill is the only contraceptive that is almost 100 per cent foolproof, Dr. Baxter said.

It does seem to cause depression and emotional mobility in some women, she said, and has been connected with thrombo-embolic diseases. But the risks of dying from the pill are 10 times less than from dying in an accident, 15 times less than from dying from cancer, four times less than committing suicide, she said.

Thursday's talk was the first of five noon-hour meetings to be held at the YM-YWCA, sponsored by the Status of Women Action Group.

Next meeting is Thursday, Oct. 19, when Canada Manpower counsellor Doris Bedard will talk about Manpower programs. All women are welcome free of charge.

Tobacco Ad Ban Urged By Doctors

MELBOURNE (Reuters) —

Medical practitioners from around the world have called for a total ban on cigarette and tobacco advertising, the introduction of highway rescue teams and improved sex education.

The future role of the general practitioner and the development of community health centres were also discussed by doctors from 33 countries during the Fifth World Conference of Medical Practitioners.

Doctors representing the Royal Australian College of Practitioners and the Canadian College of Family Physicians initiated the move for a ban on cigarette and tobacco advertising.

Dr. D. S. Muecke, president of the Australian college's preventative and community health committee, said the ban probably would not affect people who already smoked.

"What we are trying to do is to stop people from starting," he said.

He told the 1,000 doctors attending the conference that any such ban would also have to be reinforced by individual doctors warning their patients of the health hazards of smoking.

Australian Dr. Hans Pacy brought up the subject of highway rescue teams. He said highway authorities should have accident rescue teams on contract and should install free emergency phones, particularly in rural areas.

On sex education, a report from a preventative and community workshop said family doctors were the group best suited for training as sex educators.

The report said all young people should receive sex education as a normal part of growing up.

"This can be done by general practitioners in co-operation with schools and parents, who should be actively involved," the report said. It added that moral decisions about sex should be left to young people themselves.

Dr. Fred Gilbert caused controversy when he predicted that the general practitioner would be extinct and replaced by community health centres by the year 2000.

The doctor, a professor of social and preventative medicine at the University of Hawaii, said teams of three to 15 persons would divide the work now being done by the general practitioner.

New School Workshop For Learning-Disabled

CHESTER, N.S. (CP) — The newlyformed South Shore Community Services Association is building a school workshop for children with learning disabilities.

The building, to be constructed on an eight-acre farm three miles from here, is expected to be ready to accommodate 40 to 50 pupils by the end of October.

The municipal school board, the Nova Scotia education department and the education faculty of Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S., are taking part in the project.

A mobile diagnostic demonstration treatment centre will be set up in the school where persons in the community, especially in the school system, will be evaluated and given programs to help them towards better intellectual achievement.

Dr. David Baker, executive secretary of the South Shore Community Services Association, says the centre will help not only those classified as mentally retarded or those with learning disabilities.

"A great many persons, who are by every available test known to be of normal category, may be able to do even greater work if their slight problems and hearing disabilities are fixed up."

The diagnostic unit will be under the direction of Dr. Thomas Tillmans, professor of special education at Acadia University, in co-operation with Dr. Donald MacDonald, head of Acadia's education department.

Medical coverage will be given by the staff of the Lzaak Walton Killam Hospital for Children in Halifax.

Those working in the school workshop hope to find a better means of preparing disadvantaged young people for a fuller life while providing them with some academic education.

Dr. Baker said emphasis will be placed on family living and vocational training commensurate with the children's ability. The aim will be to develop their potential and help them relate to ordinary living in a rural community.

The building provides 14,000 square feet of space and is being built at a cost of $270,000. Equipment will cost an additional $65,000 to $70,000.

Changing levels and the use of smaller spaces within larger ones in the building are designed to provide a situation for relaxation and communication in which students can be reached and drawn out.

Courts Wrong for Divorce

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Whatever chance of reconciliation a married couple with problems has is lost once they walk into the courtroom, a family court judge said here this week.

Judge G. M. Thomson told a seminar on marriage and divorce at Queen's University that present laws encourage judges to make decisions they are ill-equipped to make.

"I'm often struck by how artificial the court process is as compared to the problem that a couple brings before me and I'm amazed by how much the court process can cause discord in the couple's life," he said.

Judge Thomson said he feels that his colleagues on the bench together with lawyers often make it difficult for those seeking a divorce to understand what is going on; that the legal process is indecipherable to the untrained.

He said the courtroom situation creates hostilities that might be avoided if negotiations could be conducted outside the stiff formality of the courtroom.

"I don't think the present law has gone as far as it could in serving the best interest of both parties," he said. "I would myself minimize the court process as much as possible."

FEMALES ONLY

TORONTO (CP) — After years of being refused admission to "male-only" domains, one group of women here has turned the tables.

Men have been barred from attendance at all-women seminar groups being conducted as part of a course at the University of Toronto entitled Women — Oppression and Liberation.

The course began Sept. 20 and will continue until Dec. 6 in the faculty of education. It is being offered for credit through the department of interdisciplinary studies, but it is also open to the public.

The course is being attended by about 500 persons and 80 of these are men. The men meet in their own all-male seminar group.

Spokeswomen for the co-operative that runs the course deny that there was any desire to get back at men involved in the decision to keep men out of the women's seminar groups.

VISITING ANIMALS FAR FROM RAT RACE

CHICAGO (AP) — In an age when it's becoming increasingly difficult to get a physician to make a house call, Dr. Leon Schwartz still makes the rounds, but only for animals.

Schwartz is a veterinarian whose practice is limited to making house calls. And while the pace may sometimes be gruelling — usually from eight in the morning to eight at night — Schwartz says he's still "having the time of my life."

Schwartz decided to make only house calls after running an animal hospital for 25 years.

"I decided that I wanted to get out of the rat race a little," he said.

Earful of Corn

DEAR ABBY: About that man who sang to his tomatoes: I can top that. I read poetry to my corn.

After planting the seeds of sweetcorn, I got out my Shakespeare, turned to Julius Caesar and improvised: "Sunshine, bumble bees and cornstalks. Lend me your ears."

And believe me, it works. If you wish, I will send you a picture of the corn as it is now, growing rapidly in a flower box on my front porch. I hope you won't think this too corny to print. — Kernel Sam Guggenheim

DEAR SAM: Never mind the picture. I'm a sucker for corn, so send me your ears?

DEAR ABBY: Just read your letter about the guy who thought "music" would help his vegetables grow, so he went out in the garden with a six-pack of beer and serenaded his tomato plants. Could he have been growing "stewed" tomatoes? — Reader.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are middle-aged with five children, ages ranging from nine to 21 — all home and, of course, in school.

My husband nets a fair income, and I have a part time professional job, a 12-room house, and am active in church and civic affairs.

The last two years the teenage children (ages 13 to 18) of my two married sisters have been hitchhiking to Mother's every time they have some difficulty at home. Mother isn't well (as my sisters know) and since Mother lives near me and I look after her, you know where the kids end up. That's right. With me!

We have trouble enough keeping our own kids in line without taking on the responsibility of our nieces and nephews and I am sick and tired of all the extra cooking and cleaning and laundry for these kids, not to mention the expense. I am fond of them, but I don't want them in my hair all the time.

Some of the kids are pretty far out, and already I see some of their kooky ideas beginning to take root, and I am honestly afraid of leaving them alone in my house when I go to work. I am all for sending them home after a week's visit, and making a rule to have only one of them here at a time. My husband says, "Ask Abby." What do you say? — Stumped

DEAR STUMPED: I say seven days of them would make one week! But don't surprise them with the news. Let them know now that you have placed a ceiling on their visits.

Are you aware of the manifold tests and preparations that precede the launching of any new product you find in your supermarket? Do you know the determined efforts manufacturers make to have the public try their latest items?

The 12-page pamphlet The Food Story discusses these and many equally interesting questions. It also presents a guide to good nutrition and tells you which foods are sold by grade. You will find tips on how to get the most from your freezer and advice about which foodstuffs and dishes freeze well.

Finally, the booklet offers helpful hints on how to balance your food budget. It urges you, for instance, to limit yourself to a once-a-week shopping trip and to buy only fruits and vegetables in season. It also encourages you to buy some of the cheaper meat cuts which, if cooked slowly, can be just as tasty as chops, steaks or rib roasts.

New Canning Label

NEW YORK (AP) — Del Monte Corp., a San Francisco-based food company, became this week the first United States canner to initiate a federally-approved nutritional labelling program.

Richard G. Landis, company president, said 34 products accounting for more than half of Del Monte's domestic production would be equipped with the new labels starting next summer.

Each label will list the calories, fat, protein, and carbohydrate content of the product per cup, as well as the percentage of a standard recommended daily allowance of 10 basic nutrients contained in a one-cup portion, Del Monte said.

HOCKEY TIPS

By Bobby Orr

Another National Hockey League season started last weekend — although, for many of us, the big games actually got under way a month earlier, when the Soviet Selects came to Canada.

most NHL players know that it's important to arrive at training camp in September in reasonably good shape. Youngsters, too, should plan a conditioning program before starting their first game to avoid injuries.

In my own case, I had a special conditioning schedule this season. After my knee operation, it was important that I watched my diet. I couldn't exercise and with my normal desire for food, I wound up adding some pounds. Usually, I'm on the ice at my hockey school throughout July and August.

As a result, I had to not only work slowly on the knee but I also had to do it with extra padding which added more stress. Once I reported to Team Canada, I went on a strict diet and exercise program. Condition can't be stressed too strongly. I find

REDLEGS 7-TO-5 FAVORITES

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Cincinnati Reds were quoted as 7-5 favorites Thursday to win the world series by odds-makers at Harrah's Tahoe Racebook.

No betting odds were posted on the world series opener Saturday against the American League champion Oakland Athletics.

Acre-and-Half of Ice In New Burnaby Arena

VANCOUVER (CP) — What is claimed to be the world's largest indoor ice arena is being built in suburban Burnaby, and a spokesman says the prime-time ice hours are already almost fully-booked.

Al Harris, sales supervisor for the development, said that although the project has not been advertised, word has leaked out and bookings for 8:30 a.m. to midnight for the 1½ acres of ice are almost solid.

The $2 million private development is owned by Columbia 4-Rinks Ltd., a group of local businessmen.

The project will house four standard NHL-sized ice surfaces—200 by 85 feet—under a single roof and 16 changing rooms and related facilities. It will be open 24 hours a day for most of the year.

Gail L. Stevenson, president of Columbia 4-Rinks, says the idea evolved because of the shortage of ice facilities for hundreds of groups, including minor hockey clubs.

In response to strong interest shown by area schools,

Columbia 4-Rinks plans a bus system for physical education classes.

Power skating, training camps, hockey schools, public skating, figure skating, skating parties and general hockey will also be accommodated.

A market survey by the company estimates that over one million people will pass through the doors of the new arena every year.

The building will be supported on pillars because of soil conditions in the area. It will have special heating cables two feet below the ice surface to prevent heaving from frost.

Politics of Land Use MLA Debate Theme

Politicians never seem to be able to stop being politicians.

At an environment panel discussion in Newcombe Auditorium Thursday night three recently elected local MLAs agreed the debate should be non-partisan but the talk never drifted far from politics.

Conservative MLA for Saanich and the Islands, Hugh Curtis, NDP member for Esquimalt Jim Gorst and Conservative MLA for Oak Bay, Scott Wallace, spoke to about 100 at the discussion sponsored by the Greater Victoria Environmental Centre as part of National Environment Week.

"Quality environment for all Capital Region residents: parks, green belts, pollution, recycling and development" was the topic for discussion. Victoria architect John di Castri was moderator.

Land-use control took up much of the debate and it was here that politics became the issue.

"The whole question revolves around the philosophy of private ownership of land," NDPer Gorst said, "perhaps by the year 2000 we'll have leasing of land from the government with stipulated limitations on use."

"You've just explained your socialistic philosophy," Wallace replied, "I'm at the opposite end of the spectrum."

"The crux of the question is how much we're going to allow government to take away the private rights of the individual."

Wallace said mechanisms to control development and land usage exist "somewhere in the middle" and are evolving.

Curtis agreed that mechanisms for dealing with the environment are already working, citing the "do-it-yourself" aspect of the Gulf Islands community planning as an encouraging precedent.

All three panel members said they were pleased with the recent Capital Regional Board planning report which outlined five alternative development plans for the region.

On automobile pollution, Wallace again said the government couldn't legislate against the right of an individual to drive a car.

"I doubt if anyone in this room is prepared to give up their car... it's so much a part of our society," he said. "I look to technology to cope with the problem."

Gorst said the government could take a greater role through the promotion of rapid transit. He suggested that the old railway lines running into the city from Sooke and parts of Saanich might provide the basis of such a rapid transit system.

Zero population growth brought up politics again when Gorst argued that the individual would have to give up rights to a more community-oriented control on population.

Curtis said he couldn't subscribe to the concept but agreed that he didn't know the "population carrying capacity" of the province.

All three agreed that more community participation was needed in planning environment legislation and that advisory boards at every level of government would be useful.

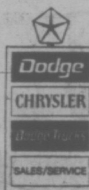

They also agreed that the profit motive was a basic problem in fighting environment issues and it certainly was Thursday night: the money donated at the door was stolen.

Richard Chamberlain as Edward VIII

Faye Dunaway as Wallis Simpson

For the Woman I Love!

"... I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love."

With these words King Edward VIII ended one of the shortest reigns in British history as he abdicated in order to marry the American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson. A dramatization of the closing stages in the constitutional crisis brought on by this celebrated romance will be presented on CBC-TV's Sunday At Nine, October 15. Entitled The Woman I Love, it stars Richard Chamberlain as Edward VIII and Faye Dunaway as Mrs. Simpson.

Others in the cast include Robert Douglas as the King's antagonist, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, who feared for the well-being of the country if the King persisted in a course that divided his subjects (Britain then had 2,000,000 unemployed, an unpopular government, and a strong Fascist movement under Oswald Mosley); Eileen Herlie as the Queen Mother, Queen Mary, also bitterly opposed to the match on the grounds that Mrs. Simpson was "unsuitable"; Henry Oliver as the King's staunchest supporter throughout the crisis, Winston Churchill, then out of office and spending his 'years in the wilderness'; Patrick MacNee as the King's Equerry who spirited Mrs.

Simpson away to France at the height of the crisis; and Murray Matheson as the King's private secretary.

Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, Prince of Wales, acceded to the throne on January 20, 1936, on the death of his father King George V. The new King was already seeing Mrs. Simpson but the romance did not become public knowledge in Britain until late in the year and was therefore entirely unexpected by the mass of the people.

Public opinion was divided but attempts were made by the King's supporters to establish 'King's Party'. Many people would have preferred the government to fall rather than the King they remembered as the handsome and popular young Prince.

At no time during the crisis were there official objections to Mrs. Simpson on the grounds that she was a commoner and a foreigner, the King's forebears had married foreigners and his brother, the Heir Presumptive, the Duke of York, had married a commoner. The chief obstacle was Mrs. Simpson's status as a divorced woman with both former husbands still living, and Edward, as King, was supreme governor of the Church of England, which did not countenance divorce.

Unable to find any other way out of the situation, the King announced in a broadcast from Windsor Castle on Dec. 11, 1936, his abdication in favor of his brother the Duke of York. His reign had lasted only 325 days, half of that period in Court mourning. It was the briefest reign since his medieval namesake Edward V.

The day following the broadcast he left England aboard the destroyer Fury, as Duke of Windsor, and never again lived in his own country. He died at the age of 77 in his home in Paris on May 28 this year.

The Woman I Love was written by John McGreevey, directed by Paul Wendkos, and produced by David J. O'Connell. Executive producer: David Victor.

Television Questions and Answers

Q. Settle a $5 bet at our office. How old was Irene Ryan when The Beverly Hills bachelors started and how old is she now? —D.J.M.

A. She was 37 then and 67 now. —D.J.M.

Q. In the recent showing of The Great Escape, what part was the character of the notorious Pierre supposed to play? At the battle for Boro-dino in civilian dress, he appeared out of place. —H.C.

A. Author Leo Tolstoy wrote much of himself into the character of Pierre — the detached observer on life and human events who studied his world as an art form and philosophized on it. At Boro-dino, Pierre the observer was seen being pulled along in spite of himself. I agree, he did appear ridiculously out of place. —H.C.

Q. I recently saw a commercial on ABC advertising Totem Sandwich Bags. The item was compared to another leading sandwich bag whose name was clearly revealed. I have noticed many other commercials are doing this, too. Isn't there a law prohibiting this type of advertising? —C.P.

A. To the contrary, the Federal Trade Commission has encouraged the ad men to point up the weaknesses of their competitors by name. The theory is if they're all at each other's throats, something approximating truth may be revealed to the consumers out front.

Q. On Let's make a Deal, why do those people jump and scream like nuts? They sure act silly. —M.J.M.

A. Contestants on the show are selected on the spot on the basis of those most willing to strip away all sense of dignity and stand with their greed glands naked to the world.

Q. Is Barbara Stanwyck making any TV movies? —E.D.

A. You may remember she was to have made the movie-for-TV pilot for Fitzgerald and Price last winter when illness took her out of it and she was replaced by Susan Hayward. Now, a new story in which she'll play a lady newspaper publisher is being tailored for her and will be broadcast as a movie-for-TV this season with an eye toward a series for next season.

Q. Tell me the name of Jackie Gleason's first TV show. And when did he start doing his Honey-mooners? —S.P.

A. Gleason's first show was a season of The Life of Riley in 1949. In 1951 he went on the Dumont network with Calvalcade of Stars in which he introduced a whole spectrum of characters, including Ralph Kramden, but things really didn't get rolling until 1952 when The Honey-mooners sketches became the hit portion of his weekly variety show.

NEW FALL PROGRAMS

Saturday

Kung Fu, on 4 at 8. David Carradine stars as one of TV's most unusual heroes — a Chinese-American priest holding his own on the violent western frontier. His ace-in-the-hole is Kung Fu, a discipline governing a form of combat that's as lethal as any Colt .45. One thing more — Caine (Carradine) is also wanted for a murder he committed in China and is constantly being searched out by bounty hunters. (60 mins.)

Legacy, on 9 at 8:30. Yellowstone National Park is the focus of the premiere of this series, produced in recognition of U.S. national parks centennial. (30 mins.)

Cool Million, on 8 at 9, and 6 at 11:15. Preview of a new crime drama series starring James Farentino. This 2-hour pilot puts him on the jet-set scene as he hunts for an heiress — at a fee of one million dollars — if he's successful.

Once again Saturday is a good day for children's TV. At 9 o'clock on Channel 4 the CARTOON MOVIE is all about the great baseball star Willie Mays, and an angel who grants him a special wish. Don't forget STORY THEATRE at 11:30 on Channel 8. CBS CHILDREN'S FILM FESTIVAL on Channel 7 or 12 at 1 o'clock tells of the adventures of a 10-year-old Polish boy who wants to become an artist. A special treat (especially for the girls) is the movie, HEIDI, with Shirley Temple on Channel 11 at 2:30. Then at 3 o'clock on Channel 2 or 6 watch CHILDREN'S CINEMA. The title this week is THE MAGIC KITE and it's all about some French children who find a kite that came all the way from China. (Shown in two parts with conclusion next week).

Family Unit Probed on Human Journey

The family the basic unit in almost all societies, is increasingly being placed under the microscope. Experts differ on the amount of change, but all agree that the family will undergo some modification in the future.

Historically the "extended" family consisting of parents, children, aunts, uncles and grandparents was the norm. Today, however, due to a variety of factors, the "nuclear" family made up of a father, mother and their children, and often separated by many hundreds of miles from other relatives, is the standard. Thus the single nuclear family absorbs all the changes taking place around it and must also attempt to solve its internal crises without recourse to relatives.

The family, its changing role, alternatives to the family and organizations working to combat the tensions within the family and on its individual members, is studied on the latest episode of the CTV Television Network's multi-award winning documentary series The Human Journey. The Family telecasts Sunday, October 15, 10:00-11:00 p.m. EDT.

Experts

In this hour long color program several noted psychiatrists and social scientists give their opinions and the possible changes that will take place in the family.

Dr. Norman Bell, head of the Family Studies section at the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry in Toronto, is seen on the program conducting an interview with a typical suburban family. This family however, were not completely typical of those usually seeking counsel from Dr. Bell, in that they believed professional help was unnecessary in their case. During the interview Dr. Bell discovered an impenetrable wall of non-verbal communication which prevented him from going beyond the "group" facade.

Dr. Robert Cancro, a psychiatrist with the University of Connecticut is also interviewed. Cancro believes that the stresses of today's family are far greater than at any time previously. "We are asking too much of it" says Cancro, "The problems of living in the world, of finding meaning, purpose and dignity in life, are increasingly difficult to satisfy. We look to the family to give us all of the things we are not getting any place else."

Community

In the village of Markham, just north of Toronto, The Family examines the Family Life Centre where psychologist Mario Bartoletti is the executive director. The Centre is fully community sponsored and supported and is similar to nearly two dozen such centres which have developed across Canada in the last few years. The Centre is devoted to the family and since its start over 1000 different people have used it. Cost of counselling is based on the ability to pay and may range from nothing to a maximum of fifteen dollars.

Bartoletti says that the people of Markham have made a commitment to the Centre and this accounts for why it is able to operate on such a modest budget.

Warren Farrell, an assistant professor of political science at Rutgers University in New Jersey, discusses the future role of day care centres and how they will affect the family and Dr. Benjamin Spock speaks of the trend towards communal living and the need of children to rebel.

The Family was written and directed by Robert Conroy. Photography was by Robert Rouveroy, sound by Ingrid Cusiel and the program was edited by Carl Connell. The program was prepared and researched by Jessica Markland and produced by Robert Conroy. Martha Henry narrates. Executive producer is Jerry Lawton. The Human Journey is a production of CTV News.

Bit parts: Paula Kelly has been added to the cast of Soylent Green at MGM... Elke Sommer will do a TV special on a tour of famous haunted sites in Europe...

Bit parts: Paul Newman moved his executive offices from Goldwyn Studios to the Burbank Studios for movie activities... Patricia Neal will star in The Diddakol, a television movie... John Ireland signed for a top role in The House of Seven Corpses.

SOME FRIENDS DISAPPEAR WHEN YOU LEAN ON THEM... At least such is the experience of Kurt Russell and Joyce Menges who are leaning on their invisible co-star in Walt Disney's comedy spoof, Now You See Him, Now You Don't. Also starring in this delightful film are Cesar Romero, Joe Flynn, Jim Backus and William Windom. Now You See Him, Now You Don't is currently playing at a local downtown Victoria theatre.

THE TITANIC CONTROVERSY

Sixty years ago last April 16 the "unsinkable" Titanic went down in the North Atlantic after hitting an iceberg on her maiden voyage. Over 1500 men, women and children lost their lives in this disaster which was one of the biggest news stories of this century.

In this anniversary year controversy still rages over the Titanic and the Californian, reputed to be the steamer seen from the deck of the doomed liner as it sank, unaided. Broadcaster Neil Copeland has written and narrated a program especially for Between Ourselves, October 16 at 8:03 p.m. EDT entitled — Titanic: Six Decades of Controversy.

Copeland traces the last fateful hours of the mammoth liner, and interviews some of the survivors of the tragedy, now in their nineties, as well as the man who plans to dispel the mystery of the Titanic by raising the liner from her two-and-a-half mile deep grave.

The program also includes statements made at the time by officers of both ships, and views from authors and marine historians who have closely studied the Californian controversy.

The program was first aired last spring around the anniversary date; it has been made available by Radio Canada International for broadcast overseas. Portions of the recorded material was obtained from archives of Titanic Enthusiasts of America, and the BBC.

Veteran Actor In Two TV Series For New Season

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — Gary Merrill, who somewhat cantankerously admits he has spent most of his life avoiding work except when necessary, suddenly finds himself — at age 57 — about to star in not one but two television series in the same season and both in syndication.

First, Merrill, former husband of Bette Davis, and anticonformist (he recently showed up at a WGBS-TV black-tie dinner promoting new shows wearing Bermuda shorts, jacket and skinny tie) is the new Dr. Gillespie in still another revival of Dr. Kildare. Young Mark Jenkins will be in the title role, while Merrill takes over from an illustrious line that started with Lionel Barrymore in the movies and Raymond Massey in TV.

Then, too, Merrill has been signed on as host of another syndicated venture titled Guest of Honor, in which he plays a sort of Dick Cavett-type interview-show host. But his guests come right out of early American history: Alexander Hamilton (played by Lloyd Bridges), Dolly Madison (Barbara Rush), General Cox (Allen Hale Jr.) and Paul Revere (William Windom).

"We're all in the dress of the era," Merrill explained, "and I sit there like Dick Cavett with my guest and interview them about their deeds and philosophies. Let me tell you something. I learned a lot of history taping the early shows and at age 57, no less."

There doesn't appear to be much conflict in making the two shows at the moment. He taped six of the half-hour Guest of Honor series before coming West to start production of Dr. Kildare series on the MGM lot. He'll do 24 episodes, a full season. Even at that, he finds the workload much to his liking, with a good deal of spare time.

I talked with Merrill in his dressing room on the MGM lot. He was wearing Bermudas, of course, and a sloppy beach hat. His dressing-room walls are decorated with banners, which read like a tribute to his rebellious character: "Earn Cash in Your Spare Time — Black-mall Your Friends." Another observed: "Dirty Old Men Need Love, Too."

"When my agent called me at home in Maine last winter, it was one of those blizzardy nights, and I figured anything might sound good, even a series. But I really didn't care about making a series, and my agent convinced me that it won't sell anyway — you know, another Kildare series — so I should take the money and run if it didn't sell, and now they've got me in a Gillespie coat."

Maine is Merrill's escape from the frenetic life. He's lived there for more than 20 years; through the stormy marriage with Bette Davis (they have three children). His outlook on life is carefree. "I've avoided work most of my life. What I want is just enough to carry me over."

"I can come out here (Hollywood), pick up some work to cover my needs, and head back to Maine. Listen, I had a four-year contract at 20th Century-Fox years ago, and made only four pictures in those four years. I didn't push it. But I made all good ones, and that's what counts."

He has an ace in the hole, his bread and butter calling, which makes it all possible to live the free and easy life he enjoys. It's called commercials and it fits right into his pattern. Once in a while, he leaves Maine for New York to service certain accounts (voiceovers), which take a day's work, and then goes back to Maine. These commercials are quite lucrative.

Suddenly, he finds himself faced with a crises. He's working more than ever. "That's funny. I've spent 30 years trying to avoid work, and I certainly don't want to work more now than I did 30 years ago. But here I am, about to become one of the few actors with two new shows on television at the same time."

But he's not kidding anyone. He's enjoying both series. "The scripts are especially good on Kildare," he observed. "We're not trying to make it a continuation, but something current. I'm not trying to be another Barrymore or Massey in the role. It's Merrill playing Gillespie. In fact, I'm not so sure I've ever seen any of the old movie or TV shows. I know I never acted in any of them."

Gary Merrill

Whatever Happened to Father Knows Best?

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Ah, yes, the television situation comedy. It came to television almost unchanged from the form it took in radio. It became a staple of programming and, for years, consisted of an idealized family with a father who wasn't too bright and a mother who could fix everything.

Added ingredients were overly bright children (who always sounded just like adults) and the family pet (always good for a few laughs).

In later years, as jokes wore thin, the game changed, but slightly. How many times could Lucy put on a black wig and test her husband's fidelity? How many times could a child overhear a father talking with an attorney about a contract and break into tears upon hearing, "... but there's no sanity clause?" and sooner or later those cases of mistaken identity — so dear to William Shakespeare — would exhaust the patience of writers, performers and even viewers.

The first changes were minor. Married women began appearing minus their husbands. Widows, you see, had more opportunity for romance and, after all, windows can stick just as easily in a business office as they can in a home. A variety of bachelor fathers appeared and, blessedly, ratings could always be hyped by having the man take a wife.

And then came Archie Bunker and All in the Family. He was the scrubbed-up version of an embittered British character in Til Death Do Us Part. He was a stereotype of a cliched American who lived on half-truths and whole prejudices and readily used pejorative terms for racial and ethnic minorities.

American television wasn't certain, at all, that it wanted what Norman Lear and Bud Yorkin had imported from England. Twice pilot films were made for ABC-TV, and twice the network turned down the series.

A third pilot was made, this time for CBS-TV, and All in the Family was eased, ever so gently, into the Tuesday night schedule during the second season of 1970. The following autumn All in the Family was a solid success, jousting in the ratings with Flop Wilson and Marcus Welby, M.D. for first place.

Then came Sanford and Son on NBC. It, like All in the Family, was a sanitized version of a British series, Size-man and Son. Thanks to the brilliance of comedian Redd Foxx and weak Friday night competition, Sanford and Son became a hit.

What next from Hollywood's hottest team of Lear and Yorkin? What else? The flip side of All in the Family, a series called Maude.

Where Archie embodied the worst features of what some people call conservatives, Maude is the opposite. She's a caricature of the knee-jerk Liberal, as fixed in her convictions as he is in his. She's just as strong-willed and just as vocal as Archie, but she works the other side of the political street.

The liberated woman, multi-married and living with a divorced daughter and grandchild, represents to some a great forward thrust in television. National magazines have babbled about television's "New freedom" and its new ability to deal with controversial subjects.

All it really means is that the content of television is now only a few hundred light years behind motion pictures and a thousand light years behind the theatre. At this rate, TV will catch up to what is actually happening in America about the same year that we colonize the planet Uranus.

Maude is, in television terms of 1972, a slickly produced and often funny program.

And if Maude is nothing more than the usual old switcheroo on a successful series, credit must be given for the excellent casting.

Beatrice Arthur, who plays Maude, is a trained, professional actress with excellent credentials. She's been a professional since 1947, has a Tony award to her credit and has been married for 22 years to the noted theatrical director, Gene Saks.

The foil for Maude, a Franklin D. Roosevelt Liberal, is Conrad Bain. He plays Arthur Sherwood, a neighbor, whose political views rest somewhere to the right of Caligula, the Third Emperor of Rome. The two characters create the kind of tension necessary for today's television comedy.

Esther Rolle plays Florida Evans, the black housekeeper, to whom Maude must constantly prove her Liberalism. Maude insists they become close personal friends, and all that Florida Evans wants is to be left alone to do her work.

The sharp-tongued exchanges might just leave a few viewers wondering, "just whatever did happen to the pleasant family life of, say, a father knows best?"

Actor Films New Series in London

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Gene Barry, survivor of Bat Masterson, Burke's Law and Name of the Game, has entered his fourth television series still on his feet but working in London.

The new show is The Adventurer which more or less sums up the actor's previous ventures on the tube.

Also, the new show is syndicated and produced by England's Sir Lew Grade. Barry is seen in various cities and at different hours and days of the week.

Working in Britain is a revelation to Barry who is accustomed to the slam-bang pace of American film making where television shows are churned out on an assembly line basis.

England more or less hand tools the product which he finds both frustrating and advantageous.

"I have to live in London 30 weeks a year," said Barry on a quick visit to Hollywood. "And that doesn't exactly thrill me to death."

"Once you get fond of this Southern California sunshine, those long, cold days in England get to you."

"English crews work much slower than we do. This is a half-hour show and it takes an American company three days to wrap it up. Over there it means five or six days.

"I don't know why they work slower. Maybe they're not geared to move as fast as we do. They still take tea breaks, but less time is lost than in the old days."

"Englishmen are more concerned about doing their jobs and getting home at a decent hour. Home life is important to them."

"We seldom go into overtime because the British workers would rather have free time than money. I'm through almost every day at 5:20 in the evening. In Hollywood I'd be working until 8 or 9 o'clock at night."

Barry has worked himself into something of a froth, but added, surprisingly, "there's something quite civilized about their work habits."

The actor is more enthusiastic about another role he is playing in a feature movie, The Second Coming of Suzanne. The picture was written and directed by Michael Barry, his 26-year-old son.

"Mike wrote the part for Orson Welles," he said. "But he took me instead when I agreed to work for minimum scale. I play a 350-pound man, so I had to wear a lot of foam rubber under my suits."

"I'm very proud of Mike and the picture. When he was only 13 my boy came to me and said he wanted to be an actor. I told him if he aspired to acting he was also aspiring to be unemployed. It must have impressed Mike. Now he's a writer-director and doing beautifully."

Moreover, Mike doesn't have to spend his winters in raw and rainy England.

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Which comes first with a song writing team, the lyrics or the music?

"About 50-50," said Hal David who writes the words for Burt Bacharach's ditties.

Bacharach and David are reaching the eminence of Rogers and Hammerstein, Lerner and Loewe, Van Heusen and Cahn, and the Gershwins as producers of popular music.

They recently completed the score for the musical version of Lost Horizon. In this case, said David, the words came first about 70 per cent of the time as dictated by the script.

David and Bacharach have been partners for 15 years. Unlike other successful teams, they live 3,000 miles apart — David in New York, Bacharach in Beverly Hills.

"Burt has an apartment back east and I have one out here," David said. "When we're working, we spend three or four weeks together at a time."

Bacharach is the glamour boy of the team. He's married to Angie Dickinson, owns race horses, appears as the star of several television specials a year.

Hal David lives on Long Island. He lives a family-oriented life. Both his teenage sons are promising musicians.

While he lacks Bacharach's pizzazz, David does shine when it comes to writing lyrics, especially for romantic ballads.

Some of his best include I'll Never Fall in Love Again, The Look of Love, Close to You, Wives and Lovers, This Guy's in Love With You and What the World Needs Now Is Love.

"We were asked to write the musical title song for the movie Alfie, which didn't appeal to us very much," David said. "What are you going to do with a name like Alfie?"

"But I wrote the lyrics for the song and Burt broke his back to come up with the best tune he could."

"It worked. I'd say it is the favorite of all our songs."

"The key to successful collaboration is that the partners rise to the best each has to offer. When one partner is down, the other has to inspire him or pull him up with his own work."

"Burt and I have written about 200 songs, maybe more, in our 15 years together. We've had 50 or 60 hits, which isn't a bad percentage. And our songs have won 25 Gold Record awards."

BURT BACHARACH
... writes music

David was unwilling to speculate whether words or music determine the success of a popular song.

"The day you can separate the words from the music there is something wrong with the tune or the score — or the men who wrote it," he said.

"Music and lyrics must flow together."

David is working on a book of poetry — alone. Lyrics are basically poems anyhow, as he sees it.

"I think if Keats, Byron, Burns, Shelley and all the other great poets were alive today they would be lyricists. The reason is simple, poets don't make much of a living today."

"Lyricists — the successful ones — do quite well by comparison."

David said writing lyrics is more than rhyming: "rhyming is an important part of a song but it's best if the listener is unaware of it."

Lyricist Hal David knows precisely what he is doing when he writes the words for a song. His task is made easier by partner Bacharach.

Bit parts: Desi Arnaz Jr. will star in a 90-minute television movie, Voyage of the Yes ... Warren Oates landed the title role in the new American international version of Dillinger ... John Wayne makes it three in a row at Warner Bros. with Wednesday Morning ...

Bit parts: Lily Tomlin will star in a one-hour comedy-variety special for CBS early in 1973 ... Bob Newhart, Don Adams and Johnny Carson will guest on Don Rickles television special Dec. 12 ...

Film Director Considered Odd Even by Tinsel Town Standards

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — Richard Sarafian tried to pay his way through New York University by working as a "gandy dancer" on the New York, Susquehanna and Western railroad in the days when it ran through Northern New Jersey. But the job lasted only a few weeks because Sarafian couldn't understand Italian.

He wasn't fired, he just suffered an injured back which sidelined him for the duration of the season. "I was the only non-Italian-speaking repairman (that's what a "gandy dancer" is to railroad men). All the others were Italian immigrants and didn't understand English. So the foreman gave all his orders in Italian.

"One day, we were holding up a section of tracks and the foreman yelled something. Everybody else let go. I held on. It nearly broke my back. My days as a gandy dancer were over."

From gandy dancer Sarafian went on to become what publicists like to call one of Hollywood's "new important directors."

Heavy-set, in his late 30s, Sarafian at times is considered an oddball, even in Hollywood. He enjoys life with a gusty flavor, admits he likes to eat and drink, but not when working.

He directed Richard Harris in a film (Man of the Wilderness) but before they started, he made Harris agree to a pact: "No drinking, for either of us, until we finish the picture."

One can imagine the trauma in London on the final day of production. True to their words, neither drank during the entire production. Then they went out on the town together.

Sarafian recalls starting the night, and much of it. He doesn't think Harris remembered too much, except that he woke up in police headquarters at Coventry.

"We were at a pub in Coventry, and decided to visit the fruit market nearby. It must have been two or three in the morning. Police headquarters were next to the market, so Harris decided to go in and sing for them. He likes to sing, you know.

"They (the police) were very nice about it. They decided I shouldn't drive any more that night, so one of the bobbies drove me home. The next morning, I learned that Harris had gone back to the pub and had gotten into a little row. So the police decided to detain him, but they did it more to protect him. They let him go in the morning."

Now Sarafian is putting the finishing touches to The Lolly Madonna War, for M.G.M. Much of the filming was done on location in Tennessee, but everybody, including stars Rod Steiger, Robert Ryan and Jeff Bridges, are back in Hollywood working on the M.G.M. lot.

It's a strange set. There are times when it looks more like a karate studio. People jump up and down, scream at each other, menace each other with their outstretched hands.

The group leader is Steiger, Academy Award winner, who employs the Steiger form of method acting, a highly physical, regimentation designed to let everything out and loosen up.

A dozen newcomers in the cast are impressed and influenced almost to a state of idolatry.

Ella Kazan liked to call it "getting the motor running." Steiger does his gymnastics and invents dialogue. It's weird. You see him yelling in all directions, words and phrases barely decipherable, and he keeps the one-way belting going virtually right onto the set, turning it off suddenly to move into the scene.

Sarafian is amused by it all. "All you see are hands going in all directions, and the kids and Steiger screaming all over the place, until I yell out 'we're rolling' and then everything falls into place like cards rustling through a computer machine."

Sarafian is married to Robert ("M.A.S.H.") Altman's sister. They all met in Kansas City where Altman and Sarafian worked together for a production company that made TV documentaries. Sarafian made his first feature there, too.

"I raised $68,000 from my local B'nai B'rith friends for a picture called Ballad of a Bad Man." He not only produced and directed, but also wrote it.

If nothing else, the film got him his first TV drama at Warners.

After a successful run in television, he moved into features and among his films was Vanishing Point, which got mixed reviews, a good deal of controversy and fattened Sarafian's bank account to the tune of $500,000.

"I would have made much more," Sarafian confided, "but I sold one-third of my action."

The money he got for selling off his third was used to take his wife and kids to Europe.

John Huston's counsel was his motivation. Sarafian recalls Huston's advice: "First set up your family. Then get on with the job."

When he got back from Europe, he got on with the job. Lolly Madonna first was offered to 20th Century-Fox. Richard Zanuck was still in charge, but a week later, Sarafian learned Zanuck had not read the script as yet.

"I heard M.G.M. was interested, so I brought it to them," Sarafian revealed. Five days later, he made the deal.

Godfather Co-Star in New Comedy Film

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — Jimmy Caan sits at a table in a downtown Los Angeles restaurant during a lunch break and we try to talk. But people keep interrupting us: the waitress who wants Jimmy's autograph on the paper napkin, the hostess who brings over two slips of paper and a ball-point pen and asks him to address them to her niece and nephew. Then there's the girl at the next table, who pushed a white sheet of paper in front of Jimmy and asks him to write some affectionate note along with his autograph, like "To my dearest, loving . . ."

"Suppose I just write, Best wishes, Caan responds, and that's what he inscribes without waiting for the girl's reaction. So it goes through what is supposed to be an interview at lunch break during the shootings of "Slither." We're in the heart of downtown Los Angeles, and next door is a tall, aging brown-brick office building. The big equipment curbs, and cameras, booms, lights, sound equipment narrows the sidewalk access. Everybody recognizes Jimmy Caan. "That's Sonny — from The Godfather," you hear young girls whisper to each other.

Occasionally someone remembers, too, that Jimmy Caan played Brian Piccolo in one of television's more widely viewed and widely acclaimed exclusive movies, Brian's Song, last season.

So it was a very good year for Jimmy Caan, one which took him from the class of promising actor to stardom. People quickly recognize him and he likes it. He signs every autograph request at lunch, sitting or standing outside between shots and walking down the street.

So he's a star. Every actor starts out hoping to achieve it.

To some, it's an obsession, to others a goal. Still others find it a challenge. The biggest problem is what to do when you've reached it.

Jimmy Caan, ironically, didn't work for eight months, not since he finished Brian's Song. It was a combination of circumstances. He had many offers. "They were all lousy pictures," he declared.

"Besides, I don't like to work too much," he added.

But soon the money cushion starts to deflate. "I got to a point where I had to do a picture," Caan confided. He was offered Slither, an MGM project. He liked the script. The costars were appealing, Peter Boyle, of Joe fame, and fresh out of a new good credit in The Candidate, and Sally Kellerman, Louise Lasser, Woody Allen's ex-wife, and Allen Garfield are also feature. He plays a not-very-bright ex-convict who joins Peter Boyle in search of hidden embezzled money, a large amount. It's a comedy-suspense, according to studio publicity.

"I wanted to do a comedy, after Brian's Song and The Godfather, Jimmy explains. "This is a suspense-comedy — whatever that is."

He wants divergent roles, Jimmy adds. He doesn't want to be hung with The Godfather image. He looks at the blackboard menu in the restaurant to emphasize his point. It reads, in honor of Jimmy's presence (he had been expected): Today's Special: Corned Beef and Cabbage — Godfather's favorite. Jimmy ordered Southern beef stew.

"I knew The Godfather would be a big picture, and what's really nice is that the history of big books is that they rarely do good in movies. This one did."

Now a sequel is being prepared, Godfather — Part II, and it makes Caan sad, even though there's talk that special flashbacks will be incorporated into the script to allow the return of Caan and Marlon Brando, both of whom die in the original film.

"They haven't spoken to me about it," Caan revealed, "but they will. I suppose I'll do it, but I'm not happy. I hate to see sequel's, from an art point of view. They don't hold up as well as the original. The Godfather made it very big, and that should be enough."

A strong wiry young man, with curly sandy-colored hair, Caan is an intense person, who says he doesn't like to work too much, but the paradox is that he still likes to stay active, even when not working. His passion is rodeo competition. He's a member of the Rodeo Cowboy Association (RCA) and has done fairly well," he reports, in competition. At the moment he's looking to buy a ranch.

Unmarried, his career has progressed evenly with a series of good performances in pictures that have had a mixed reaction. One of his own personal favorites was The Rain People, in which he played an ex-football player who suffered brain damage in a game, and is befriended by a confused young housewife. It was directed by young Francis Ford Coppola (his third directorial assignment) and a mutual admiration society developed from it. So when Coppola was hired to direct The Godfather, he immediately wanted Caan to play Sonny Corleone, the explosive oldest son.

Born Free Team Has New Lion TV Special

By DAN LEWIS

NEW YORK — The world's leading advocates of lions' liberation are at it again. Bill Travers and his wife, Virginia McKenna, those wonderful people who gave us Born Free, have liberated another lion, and television viewers will be able to see the process of rehabilitation and liberation in an affectionate documentary this Friday night (Oct. 20) on NBC-TV from 8-9 p.m.

The special is The Lion at World's End and, contrary to the title, World's End is where Christian, the lion, began his trip to freedom, rather than a terminal point. It all started when Travers went looking for a pine desk on King's Road, the well-known young people's mecca in the Chelsea section of London several years ago.

He found this quaint shop with the improbable name of World's End, and a pair of young men employed there who recognized him.

"Are you Mr. Travers?" they inquired, and, when assured, asked him to accompany them into the basement of the store.

"I found a lion living in the cellar," Travers exclaimed.

What actually happened is the lion had been purchased by a London department store, where it had been caged and put into a Christmas display. After the holiday the two young men, Anthony Bourke and John Rendall, bought the lion from the store for 200 pounds.

The youths could only shelter the lion in the cellar, and each morning put Christian into the back of a truck, and took the lion to a churchyard for daily exercises. They planned eventually to send the lion to a zoo, but became so attached to him, according to Travers, they grabbed at the coincidence of encountering Travers and his subsequent offer to help reorient the lion and prepare it for a free life in Kenya.

The entire project thereafter was put on film by Travers for a photographic record. At the time, Travers explained, he had no thoughts of a television special. The two youths, however, had kept a diary of their relationship with the lion and Travers considered the possibilities of having it published. He sent the diary to a publisher and the book came out as A Lion Named Christian.

At this point, after the liberation of the lion had been completed, from Surrey to Kenya, Travers and his wife figured they had enough footage on film to make a television special. Unlike Born Free, there never was any thought of making it into a film for theatrical release.

Travers and Miss McKenna were in New York recently for a preview showing of the film, and help publicize it before air date. It is a positively warm and charming hour of television. The lion turns out to be an engaging and affectionate animal who shows his love for the boys by frequently leaping on them and embracing them.

The film takes viewers back to the land of Boy, the now-famous lion of Born Free, in Kenya where Christian now lives as a free soul. The story, narrated by the Travers, with some dialogue sprinkled through it, is beautifully photographed and put together.

Travers went through a great deal of trouble to make it all possible for the lion to transfer to Kenya and a natural habitat. Bill flew to the country to confer with government officials and ensure a place for the lion to roam.

George Adamson, whose work with wild animals in Kenya inspired Born Free, agreed to rehabilitate Christian. Then the Travers and the two young men accompanied the lion to Kenya, where the training begins. The boys have remained in Kenya, according to Travers.

Animals and animal films are the greatest interests for the Travers, Bill explained, although both do other things. Bill recently finished a motion picture in France, co-starring Brigitte Bardot ("That's certainly a different kind of animal," Bill observed). Both he and his wife have been doing plays in London.

Born Free started their interest in animals, Miss McKenna explained. "It has enriched us tremendously."

Incidentally, Christian, the lion, was born Aug. 12, 1969, which makes it a Leo.

BOOK OFFERS CANDID LOOK AT HOLLYWOOD

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — "I'm full of curiosity: And I have an almost mystic respect for other people's talent."

That encapsulates the 42-year film career of George Cukor, subject of a new book of interviews by Gavin Lambert, On Cukor. It provides a rare moment in the spotlight for the self-effacing director who has devoted his creative life to drawing out the talent of others.

The list of Cukor films is impressive: Dinner at eight, Little Women, David Copperfield, The Women, Philadelphia Story, Camille, Gaslight, A Double Life, Adam's Rib, Born Yesterday, My Fair Lady, etcetera.

His direction helped win Oscars for James Stewart, Ingrid Bergman, Ronald Coleman, Judy Holliday and Rex Harrison. But not until My Fair Lady did Cukor win an Oscar for himself.

During much of his career Cukor has been stuck with a reputation as "a woman's director." He has pointed out that he has directed many "men's pictures" as well. But because he has helped guide the careers of a glittering array of female superstars, his comments on them are of special interest.

Jean Harlow: "A tough girl and yet very feminine, like Mae West. They both wise-crack, but they have something vulnerable, and it makes them attractive. Jean Harlow was very soft about her toughness."

ONCE HIT KATE

Katherine Hepburn: "Kate and I have been friends and collaborators for 40 years, and she once remarked there's nothing she could now say to me that would disturb me, and vice-versa . . ."

"Once, during Little Women, I actually hit Kate. Not hard enough, probably."

She had to run up a flight of stairs carrying some ice cream and I told her to be very careful because we didn't have a spare of the dress she was wearing, so she mustn't spill that ice cream.

"But she did, and ruined the dress," and then she laughed — and I hit her and called her an amateur. But, of course, she was immensely professional."

Greta Garbo: "She's extremely sensible and practical. She says what she wants and it's very fair and based on common sense. She doesn't play tricks. For example, she always quit at 5 o'clock, which seemed a great extravagance, but I knew it took her that time to be able to go home, have her dinner, compose herself, get some sleep . . ."

"She never saw 'rushes,' and I asked her why. 'I have some idea, some notion of what I'm doing,' she said, 'and every time I see it, it falls so short that it throws me.'"

Vivien Leigh: "She had this great talent for creating beauty around her; she made exquisite gardens, she dressed ravishingly, she had true breeding. And when she invited you to dinner, the food and everything were perfect."

Marilyn Monroe: "As a director, I really had very little influence on her. All I could do was make a climate that was agreeable to her . . ."

"You seldom saw her with her mouth closed, because when it was closed she had a very determined chin, almost a different face. The face wasn't all that pretty, but it moved in a wonderful way; it was a wonderful movie face."

SHOW

GUYSBOROUGH, N.S. (CP) — Privy Council President Allan MacEachen arrived here Thursday afternoon to discover he was the only person in the area aware of the scheduled meeting.

His staff had mailed 1,500 invitations to the local post office to be circulated among area residents.

Explained the embarrassed postmaster:

"We found them in Antigonish under an empty mail bag which had been dropped on top of them."

'Until Hell Freezes'

Times News Services

Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey told casual longshoremen Thursday that they can occupy Unemployment Insurance Commission offices in Vancouver "until hell freezes over" but it won't help their demands for their benefits.

Mackasey told the longshoremen that their dispute must be settled legally by a board of referees.

The board made up of representatives from labor and management and a chairman from the UIC — was to meet later to hear the longshoremen's grievances.

"Occupation of the UIC offices doesn't frighten me, panic me or solve anything," Mackasey said.

The casual longshoremen are not members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and are employed only after the 1,800 regulars have been dispatched.

They are protesting a lack of work on British Columbia docks and the fact that they didn't receive unemployment insurance during the recent B.C. dock strike because of a UIC decision that they were unemployed as the result of the strike.

Diefenbaker told about 750 people at a rally in Dauphin, Man., that the Conservatives are the only party that can defeat the Liberal government.

Another top Tory, Allan Lawrence, former Ontario secretary of justice, said Thursday he believes Pierre Trudeau will not last much longer as leader of the Liberal Party, even if the Liberals are re-elected Oct. 30.

"Even supposing the Liberals go back with a majority — certainly if a minority — Trudeau's days are numbered," said Lawrence, who quit provincial politics last month to run as a federal candidate in an Ontario riding.

Lawrence told a news conference in Vancouver that there is a feeling of "revolution" against Trudeau and his policies right across the country and that Liberal organizers are well aware of it.

Trudeau, meanwhile, arrived in Winnipeg Thursday night after a verbal battle with open-line callers in Thunder Bay, Ont., and spent a quiet evening before beginning another day of campaigning today.

ALLENDE MUZZLES
RADIO STATIONS

SANTIAGO (AP) — The Chilean government took over control of all radio stations today as President Salvador Allende's troubles increased with the announcement of an indefinite strike by small business, retail shops, the construction industry and private farmers.

They were called out in support of a country-wide trucking strike to express their opposition to Allende's socialist program.

When Chileans woke up today, they discovered that the government had established a "national network" of all Chilean radio stations "until further notice."

This meant that the president's press office was in charge of broadcasting, thus denying opposition radio stations any voice in criticizing the government.

The Marxist president declared a state of emergency in Santiago and a large part of populous central Chile Thursday as a result of the trucking strike, now in its third day. Gasoline rationing was ordered as some service stations went dry, and some bakeries ran out of flour.

Jeering, gesticulating students surround Royal car

An Apology for the Queen

Times News Services

The Queen today received an apology from the student council of a Scottish university where she was jeered at and insulted by more than 400 students Thursday.

An official inquiry has been launched into the incident in which students chanted obscene songs, hurled expletives and waved wine and whisky bottles at the Queen and Prince Philip during a campus tour at Stirling University on Scotland's east coast.

Stirling, incidentally, was the headquarters of 14th-century nationalist leader William Wallace since immortalized as a revolutionary leader.

The students had earlier tried to stage a sitdown protest against, they said, costly preparations for the royal visit.

University authorities said preparations cost the equivalent of $2,490.

A spokesman said the majority of the university's 2,400 students behaved well.

There were no arrests.

Many of the crowd waved wine and whisky bottles. Others chanted "Queen out" and "Go home, you Hun," presumably a reference to the Monarch's far-off German ancestry.

One person hurled a beer can in the direction of the monarch as another group of students ringed her chanting "she's no f---ing use to anyone, she's no f---ing use at all."

Buckingham Palace was anxious to play down the incident which one seasoned British reporter described as the worst witnessed in 12 years of covering royal tours.

A spokesman said: "The Queen was not unduly concerned for her safety. She has faced this sort of confrontation before abroad — though never in this country."

The Queen appeared unshaken by the jeers and jostling. However, many members of the Royal party were grimaced.

The local chief of police, William McKellar, who was in the royal entourage, said of the protestors:

"They were drunken scum. Her Majesty's ears were assaulted with some words that I dare say she may have never heard before."

A spokesman for the university said later, however:

"The Queen told us she thoroughly enjoyed the visit. She was laughing all the way down the driveway as she left."

RCMP TO BOOST SIZE OF DRUG, FRAUD TEAMS

EDMONTON (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday night the RCMP will increase the size of its drug and fraud squads and "national crime intelligence unit" to combat increases in certain types of crime.

Speaking to about 75 former members of the force, the minister said an increase in organized crime, "economic crimes" and drug problems will be met with an increase in RCMP sections designed to combat these crimes.

The national crime intelligence unit is to be increased to 112 members from 89, effective April 1, he said.

The commercial fraud section is to be increased to a record level across the country. The section, formed in 1967 to combat what Goyer called "rich-men's crimes committed by apparently legitimate companies and by businessmen who abuse lower-income groups," is to be increased to 161 persons from 128 by April 1.

Goyer told the veterans the RCMP will have to learn to cope with new crimes developing in Canadian society.

"The spread of terrorism within a multinational framework is but one example, and a frightening one. This is a new problem the RCMP must cope with."

The veterans were also told the word Police is being dropped as "the main basis of the RCMP's identification system." Goyer did not affirm that the force will retain the RCMP title, but said a decision will be made "in another month or two."

6-Year Term for Pusher

"Assassination by instalments" was the term used by Judge William Ostler to describe heroin trafficking when he imposed a six-year prison term for the first Victoria man to plead guilty here after Thursday's nation-wide drug sweep.

The raids by RCMP and local police Thursday netted more than 100 persons suspected of drug trafficking, but many more sought by police were still at large.

The raids culminated a six-month investigation by RCMP into peddling of heroin, cocaine, hashish, MDA and speed — methamphetamine. Warrants were made out for 276 persons.

By early today, about 115 persons had been picked up, mainly in Vancouver, Victoria, Toronto, Moncton, N.B., and Hull, Que.

Norman George Urquhart, 26, of an unknown address, pleaded guilty Thursday in Victoria provincial court to a charge of trafficking in heroin.

An RCMP undercover agent, Constable Blaine Froats, 23, testified that Urquhart sold him one capsule of the narcotic for $20 in the washroom of the Churchill Hotel, 1140 Government, July 31.

Froats said Urquhart also drove him to a place where he could make a purchase July 18.

After the guilty plea was entered Thursday, Ostler ordered a remand for a pre-sentence report but Urquhart said such a report would be of little assistance.

"My background is not too reputable," he said.

Asked if he wished to say anything before sentencing today, Urquhart replied, "at the time when I sold it I wasn't doing it for a living or profit."

Crown prosecutor Michael Hutchison said, "this offence, trafficking in heroin, is an addition to a lengthy criminal record. It's not necessary for me to point out the extent of drug use and abuse."

He told the judge the community's rights should be taken "seriously" into consideration before sentencing.

NDP Seeks A Share
In Industry

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett said Thursday his government was prepared to begin immediately to pump investment capital into secondary industries in the province in exchange for shares or some other form of partial control of the companies.

He said he was inviting businessmen to come forward with ideas for joint government-business projects — which he called "partnerships" — and added the warning that it would be the only way companies could get financial assistance from the provincial government.

There will be no more grants or giveaways to companies in B.C., he said. "The day of the ripoff is over. I won't change my mind about that."

On a long-term basis, he said, the time would come when the province would take over B.C. Tel and probably Westcoast Transmission and Inland Natural Gas as well.

B.C. Tel, which has a monopoly on telephone service in the province, is controlled by General Telephone and Electronics of New York. Westcoast Transmission, which supplies B.C. and the U.S. Pacific Northwest with natural gas, is U.S.-controlled. Inland Gas, which distributes in several B.C. regions, is Canadian-owned.

In Vancouver, J. E. Richardson, president and chief executive of B.C. Tel said:

"I have no comment to make until Premier Barrett and I have discussed the matter at the appropriate time. In my view, now is not the appropriate time to seek an appointment because I realize what a busy man the premier is."

He would not elaborate.

B.C. Tel would be purchased at a fair price to be negotiated, he said, but he would not say whether shares would be bought up at the market price.

MARKET PRICE

Today the market was active on B.C. Tel shares with the price ranging between 55 and 57.

The price was $64.50 on election day.

Barrett stressed that financial partnerships being formed in the immediate future would be on a voluntary basis based upon the ideas of the companies themselves.

He noted that during the election campaign he had suggested that Toyota might want to start up an automobile assembly plant in B.C. with 49 per cent of the shares held by Toyota, 30 per cent by the provincial government and 21 per cent by the employees — who would purchase their shares with low-interest long-term loans from the government.

Not all partnerships would follow precisely that example but all would involve some type of provincial control in exchange for investment capital, he said.

MINIMUM WAGE
HIKE AT SESSION

Premier Barrett Thursday said the minimum wage will be raised in British Columbia during the special session of the legislature which opens Tuesday.

He would not say what the new rate would be.

Present minimum level is $1.50 per hour.

An official NDP publication, NDP — A New Deal for People, issued during the election campaign, says:

"An NDP government will immediately raise the minimum wage to $2.50 per hour and will review this level annually."

Asked Thursday whether he intended to raise the minimum to $2.50 immediately, Premier Barrett said no details would be given prior to the opening of the legislature.

Muskie Claims
Sabotage

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edmund Muskie has charged that his presidential race was victimized by "a systematic campaign of sabotage," including the use of his letterhead to make false allegations that two of his democratic opponents had engaged in illicit sexual acts.

Muskie said he has not ruled out the possibility of filing suit against the Committee for the Re-election of the President and certain White House officials linked in published reports of alleged sabotage.

The incidents mentioned by Muskie and his aides included:

The celebrated "Canuck letter," in which the senator was accused of condoning a racial slur (Canucks) on Americans of French-Canadian descent. According to federal investigators that letter was part of a hoax engineered by a White House official.

More than 14 months ago, Muskie said, facsimiles of his stationery were used to mail a Harris Poll reprint dealing with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and the incident at Chappaquiddick. Postal inspectors did not determine who sent the letters, which were mailed to Democratic members of congress and resulted in complaints to Muskie about unethical campaigning.

Disruption of a Muskie fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton on April 17. According to James Goodbody, the Muskie campaign's finance chairman, the following items arrived at the dinner — collect on delivery: $300 worth of liquor, a large $50 floral arrangement, cakes from the Watergate Pastry Shop and 200 pizzas. About a dozen African diplomats, Goodbody said, and — as a final touch — two magicians were mysteriously sent, including one who flew in from the Virgin Islands. The magicians said they had been hired to entertain children, but there were no children at the dinner. According to the former Muskie aide, most of the bills for the uninvited services remain unpaid.

Several days before the Florida primary, a flyer was distributed in parts of the state on Muskie stationery. It accused two of Muskie's Democratic opponents, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson, of illicit sexual activity. "The flyer was bogus and was apparently designed to hurt Muskie, while tarring Jackson and Humphrey too," said Muskie's administrative aide, John McEvoy.

McEvoy, recalling an incident widely reported during the New Hampshire primary campaign, said, "a number of Manchester residents complained of receiving phone calls in the middle of the night from people who identified themselves as canvassers from the Harlem for Muskie Committee. They were calling New Hampshire

The Victoria branch of the B.C. Sierra Club has requested Resources Minister Bob Williams to investigate a 1969 land swap between the Social Credit government and a Campbell River logging company involving part of Strathcona Park.

The request came in the form of a letter today from the club to Williams alleging the illegality of the land swap "seems to be questionable."

The land involved is a parcel of 7,500 acres in two separate areas of Strathcona Park, west of Courtenay, and a second parcel of 90 acres in the area of Cape Scott on the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The Sierra Club says the logging company, which spokesman John Willow refused to name, was given the logging rights to the Strathcona acreage for 10 years in exchange for the Cape Scott land, which apparently is not good timber land.

The Sierra Club's objections to the swap are two-fold. The first objection is to the concept of trading a piece of an already-established park (Strathcona) for a piece of land which is destined to become a provincial park (Cape Scott).

Secondly, they object to the ratio of the exchange. The 90 acres in exchange for the timber rights to 7,500 acres amounts to a ratio of 94 to 1, favoring the logging company, Willow said.

The Strathcona acreage constitutes about 4,000 acres in the Ransall Creek area, totalling about 140 million board feet of lumber, and 3,500 acres at Oshinow Lake and Gretchen Creek estimated at about 90 million board feet.

The Sierra Club charges that the Cape Scott land is "covered by old growth, poor quality hemlock, cedar and balsam" totalling only about 2.5 million board feet. They say the asking price for the land in the summer of 1969 was $140,000.

The option to purchase the land was taken out in the fall of 1969 by an individual from Campbell River, the Sierra Club charges, and then the land was bought by the logging company.

The title was then turned over to the provincial government in exchange for the logging rights in the two areas of Strathcona Park.

A legal objection to the deal by the Sierra Club is based on the fact that no public auction took place before the deal was finalized, as is required under Section 17 of the Parks Act.

Furthermore, the contract between the provincial government and the lumber company ... fails to state requirements regarding the utilization of the timber resource, nor does it specify methods of logging, reforestation or the final disposal of logged lands," the letter to Williams says.

Willow said all the Sierra Club wants is to have the minister look into the situation and take appropriate measures "if an indication of any irregularities should become evident."

Willow said only about 20 per cent of the Strathcona Park land has been logged by the company so far, so that the remaining 80 per cent could still be saved.

He said he does not want to name the company because the club is more interested in information than in accusations.

Local 'Boutique TV' Could It Happen Here?

Being some selected items from a man's personal diary:

Item: All manner of reports from Toronto this week hailing the birth of CITY-TV, which describes itself as "the world's first genuine local television station" and I wonder how long it will be, if ever, before Victoria will have something like it.

Sandy Ross, of the Star, writes that the new station has just the right blend of casualness and authority, that there's no "me-big-communicator; you-audience" feel about the programming. Some programs are rejected by the networks as to "adult." The BBC's controversial Casanova series, for example, began as CITY'S opening night attraction, bare bottoms and all.

CHEK-TV, the single Victoria television station, though it makes very little effort toward a local identity, could certainly profit by studying the Toronto example. Advertising commitments, for one thing, are coming in twice as fast as the Toronto station hoped.

Sandy writes: "If CITY wins its gamble, it will probably be the first of dozens of such boutique TV stations across North America. More fresh ideas were introduced to the industry in a single evening's programming than the networks have produced in the past several years. I think CITY-TV will succeed in demolishing those dreadful, sober-faced barriers that have always existed in television between performers and audience. If they do, it could be a major development in the way the mass media evolves on this continent."

Local television has everything going for it that local newspapers have, could develop an intimate rapport with its viewers as well as getting away with programs considered too advanced or of special interest by the networks.

Item: A visit today from suave Ron Worley, the former deputy minister of travel, he being miffed by an anecdote titled "The Night Mr. Worley Produced His Trophy." The "trophy" was Premier Bennett. I had recalled seeing the gentlemen on a TV talk show in Palm Springs hosted by Don Wilson. Worley had used the occasion to speak almost entirely about his book, "The Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett." I had wondered if this was done at the taxpayers' expense.

Not so, says Worley. "At the time of the taping," says he, "Mr. Bennett and I were vacationing in Palm Springs at our own expense. You inferred that I had been billed by Don Wilson as being on his program to promote British Columbia. This was not the case. Don Wilson and I always get together when I am in Palm Springs and he invited me to appear on his program to talk about the book. There was never any mention that I would promote British Columbia at that time."

Item: A brief, but pleasant visit with Pierre Berton, he being here to autograph another long ton of his books, and he tells me that no statement of his in the past has aroused such controversy as his offhand reply to an interviewer who'd asked him about his last will and testament.

Berton's decision, it seems, is that the bulk of his considerable estate, including the rolling acreage and rambling home at Kleinberg, north of Toronto, will be left as a foundation for the encouragement of struggling young writers.

His seven children will be more or less cut off, in line with Berton's philosophy that happiness and success are nothing if they're not earned, as he earned them himself.

Oddly enough, the people who oppose this concept most violently are people of means, earned or inherited, who are so often obsessed with the financial security of their kids.

In that narrower sense, I suppose, Berton is demonstrating a confidence in the future of the country and its inheriting generation that's not shared by others who have made their fortunes from it.

Poor Methods Blamed For Millstream Blaze

A research project into the causes and methods of fighting the Millstream landfill fire has concluded the blaze began because dump materials were not segregated and proper covering methods were not used.

A. J. Chmelauskas, co-ordinator of the Pollution Control Board project, said today the research report, to be published once the fire is extinguished, will recommend cellular construction for all landfills in the province.

Dumps should be compartmentalized into cells of different materials, he said, so that if fires break out they will be contained in one section.

Such cells should not be more than 12 feet deep, he added, and should be covered by one to two feet of well-compacted, impervious cover material.

Chmelauskas said the Millstream fire, which originally covered a 40-acre area of the dump, should be extinguished by the end of October.

A back hoe is now digging out the remaining "hot spots" at the dump, such as stumps and logs, pushing them into a large hole where they are being burnt off, and burying any hot pieces of metal.

"Once the hot spots are put out," Chmelauskas said, "we'll drench the rest of the

ARSON BLAMED IN HOUSE FIRE

Arson was the cause of a fire at 724 Pine which did $1,500 damage Thursday night.

Victoria firemen arrived at the vacant house shortly after 10 p.m. and found three fires inside and three piles of luggage ready to be ignited, deputy chief R. J. Coates said today.

A neighbor said he had seen some "young boys" playing around the house earlier in the evening.

Hospital Talks to Reopen

Labor Minister William King has convinced the owners of Sandringham Private Hospital Ltd. to go back to the bargaining table and hammer out a settlement with 28 striking employees.

King Thursday said negotiations between the two parties will start Oct. 26.

King's announcement followed a morning meeting with Russell Shepherd, co-owner of the hospital.

The labor minister said Shepherd has agreed to meet personally with union representatives and start collective bargaining.

Twenty-eight women employees of the hospital have been on strike since Sept. 30, 1970, in an attempt to negotiate their first collective agreement.

"This is a distinct improvement over the situation that has existed for over two years and I hope that the people are ready to bargain in good faith and are anxious to resolve the dispute," King said.

He attributed the breakthrough in the dispute to his own powers of persuasion and "maybe just a general desire by both parties to get back to the bargaining table."

"There are a number of attitudes that have been held that were discussed and I think perhaps a more reasonable attitude was taken by the two parties," King said.

The minister said he expects some results from the negotiations "in a matter of weeks" and said he is optimistic the dispute can be satisfactorily settled by that time.

The dispute has been going on at the hospital since May of 1970 when employees at Sandringham applied for certification and then filed a complaint on behalf of two employees alleging unfair labor practices.

The union was certified and applied for a meeting with management to negotiate a collective agreement.

When no agreement was reached, a mediation officer was appointed, but with no further results.

On Feb. 16, 1972, the Labor Relations Board ruled, after a hearing, that the hospital was not and had not bargained collectively with the union. The decision was appealed but the same results were found.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It was a strange breakfast. Tea spiked with cherries helped wash down mounds of cabbage and carrot salad that wafted hot fumes of spices from the eaters' mouths, husky Russian bread and plates of candies and cookies.

If the fare was unusual so was the setting — the officers' dining room aboard a Russian fish factory ship, alongside at Ogden Point to unsnarl nets caught in her propeller when a winch jammed.

Conversation wasn't exactly sparkling this morning as we dined aboard the Tekhnolog.

There was a language barrier. None of the 100 men aboard spoke English and Russian isn't a normal second language for westerners.

We tried a dictionary — too slow. The accommodating first officer, Victor Petrenko, used the ship-to-shore phone. Within minutes a car drew up at the jetty. In it was Fred Ratniuk, of 2525 Gardon, who has lived in Canada for 31 years.

With Ratniuk on hand things went better. We talked of the Russian-Canadian hockey series. How did they like it?

We were told they liked the hockey — not the fighting. We told them, through Ratniuk, we felt the same way.

The radio officer came in, sat down and began eating. He, unlike his shipmates, had a modish longish haircut.

His name, we were told, is Vladimir Wacalaga. We were assured that there were no hippies in Russia but some people — even scientists — wore their hair as long as Wacalaga.

In a blue track suit, flashing a gold-tooth as he smiled, the ship's doctor noticed our eyes on the framed pictures. He tells us they're all of Lenin and Karl Marx.

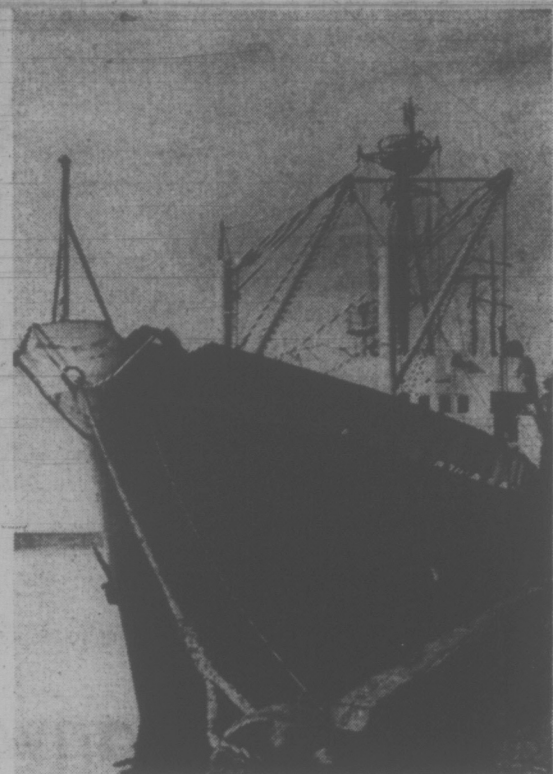

How did they manage to get permission to come in to Victoria to free their propeller when they can't speak English?

We were told this was done through their embassy in Ottawa.

The ship's dog comes in and makes embarrassing sniffs at our legs. The officers smile, a little abashed.

We try to lighten this situation by asking his name. We're told it's the equivalent of Ball, because he's a rolly-polly. His manners are excused they say he's only five months old.

We change the subject again. We've noticed the television set and the movie projector. What else do they do in their spare time when at sea?

RUSSIAN factory ship Tekhnolog waits for the tide to head out to the high seas again.

We're told they play checkers and there's all sorts of small musical instruments aboard — violins, mandolins and accordions.

We're told that there are five women aboard, working in the kitchen and making beds.

One of them, Lena Egorova is 27 today. She's brought on deck to have a birthday picture taken with the others.

In spite of the language difficulty, they answer questions frankly until we begin to ask what fish they catch and process. One of the younger officers starts speaking when we ask if they ever bring aboard salmon.

The doctor firmly halts the conversation, mentioning one word, over and over again.

We keep asking what type of fish? Finally, Ratniuk says it's a fish he's never heard of. We drop the subject.

We find that the ship is out from May until January. Her home port is Petropavlovsk on the Kamchatka Peninsula, directly across from the Aleutian Islands on the map.

Where did she get propeller trouble?

Here, again, the answers are careful. We're told it was in neutral waters, they don't quite know where.

As if to compensate for the lack of answers, the doctor hands out small packages of Russian chocolate as we leave.

LONG-HAIRED radio operator, far right, is exception rather than the rule in Russia. His shipmates say

Saanich Firehall Talks Set

Discussions leading to a new Saanich firehall serving University of Victoria campus and the Cadboro Bay-Ten mile Point area are expected to take place early next month.

Council's fire committee chairman Ald. William Noel said the committee, fire chief Harold Gains, Mayor Hugh Curtis and administrator John Tribe will meet UVic dean of administration Trevor Matthews to discuss the proposal.

Saanich council has expressed the hope that UVic will co-operate with Saanich in siting a fire station to mutual advantage of the university and the surrounding community.

The Victoria Labor Council is asking B.C. Trade and Industry Minister Alex Macdonald for a meeting to discuss "the abandonment of Victoria by industry" and its effect on jobs.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said today there is concern about "the gradual erosion of industrial activity in this city."

He points to current uncertainty about the future of the Bapco paint factory on Belleville Street where 200 people work.

"The company is keeping it a great secret," said Ryan. "We are very anxious to know what the situation is. If it is a fait accompli, then the services of Canada Manpower should be put to work immediately, and get some retraining set up."

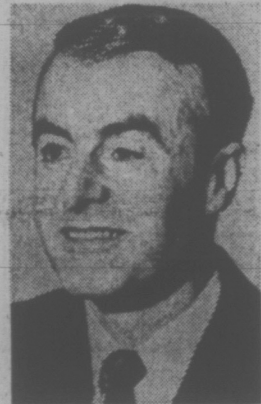

"There is a feeling that the company will move to Vancouver."

Company officials confirmed in August that a number of options are under consideration, but declined comment on persistent rumors of a move to Vancouver.

Ryan said the labor council is not opposed to "recovery of land on the waterfront that environmentalists talk about" but that Bapco should relocate in Greater Victoria.

Asked about the industrial decline of Victoria, Ryan pointed to the closure of Victoria Machinery Depot shipyard, closure of some major bakeries and fears of other plants moving, such as B.C. Forest Products, the biggest private employer in the area.

While there wasn't been anything definite about BCFP, Ryan said there has always been "a feeling it may be moved. There is always fear. The climate is not really settled or stable."

City's Industry 'Eroding'

FIRST ABORTIONS AT VGH

The first therapeutic abortions undertaken at Victoria General Hospital were performed today although the senior administrator declined to say how many.

John Murray, acting executive director, said Thursday he did not think the number any more relevant than the number of appendectomies or any other operations performed for the day.

No abortions were performed at the former St. Joseph's Hospital, founded by the Sisters of St. Ann 96 years ago, because the Catholic Church opposes the operation. But the hospital was turned over to a public society last February.

Since the law authorizing abortions was liberalized three years ago, Royal Jubilee Hospital has been carrying the climbing workload. There were 51 approvals for abortion operations at Jubilee last month.

Murray said earlier that the board of directors had decided it did not have the moral right to refuse the use of a public acute general hospital for any legitimate medical procedure performed by a qualified physician.

Thursday he said that from a recent survey he understands almost every accredited non-denominational hospital in British Columbia is now performing abortions provided they have the qualified medical staff and facilities.

Speed-Up for Three Projects

The chairman of the Capital regional hospital board said today Health Minister Dennis Cocke has given his blessing to three special hospital projects pending clarification of firm costs.

Art Young, who along with representatives from the region's advisory board, met with Cocke and some of his advisors Thursday afternoon, said the projects are the open heart surgery unit being developed at Royal Jubilee Hospital, expansion of the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital and physiotherapy and kitchen additions at Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island.

What the regional representatives wanted was provincial authority to borrow $215,000 beyond the limits approved by referendum four years ago so the projects, seen as crucial, can proceed right away.

Young said Cocke indicated if the projects are important enough to be done before the next referendum, he will recommend them to the treasury board. The health minister wanted specific cost figures, said Young.

The regional hospital representatives got an excellent reception from the new health minister at their first meeting, Young said.

They also got an indication Cocke has no objection to the referendum the regional hospital board wants to hold next March.

The referendum will seek public approval to borrow for renovation and expansion of regional acute care hospitals.

Young said that Cocke suggested the referendum cover plans for a shorter period, four to five rather than up to seven years. That means the referendum will likely be for $18 million to $22.5 million.

The province pays 60 per cent of building costs with regional ratepayers paying the balance through long-term borrowing.

Beer Garden on Parkland Rapped by Church Board

Spokesmen for St. Aidan's United Church congregation are protesting the sale of beer last June in a Saanich park on behalf of amateur sports groups.

Objection to a Sportsarama beer garden is contained in a letter to Saanich council from J. F. Ritz, clerk of session, of St. Aidan's, 1691 Broadmead, situated one mile south of Lambrick Park where the sports day was held.

About 400 dozen beer were sold at the event, which took place on a weekend when weather was sunny and warm.

Rev. J. R. Allan, minister of St. Aidan's, said he supported the view taken by the board of session, which was opposed to the principle of drinking in a public place in the vicinity of children.

He disliked the idea of beer sales to support children's sports, particularly with families and children present.

The minister said it was his personal view that "there should be better ways of doing it."

"There may be a loophole in the law, to permit this, but I regret it," Rev. Allan said.

Saanich council gave permission for the Sportsarama — a list of its kind in Saanich — which was organized to provide financing for amateur athletic travel expenses when teams were participating in competitive events away from home.

Parks administrator Bert Richman observed recently the beer garden was a particularly successful aspect of the program.

The beer garden was situated in a former barn on the Lambrick estate which has been converted to an auditorium and dressing rooms using contributions from Victoria and District Baseball Association.

Aldermen are expected to discuss the church protest at a meeting of council Monday night.

Emergency B.C. Grants

Education Minister Eileen Daily today announced emergency grants of $33,787 to Sooke school district for the hiring of three teachers and $4,000 to the Saanich Peninsula school district for resource materials.

The two districts, along with 26 other districts in the province, will be allowed to overspend their 1972 budgets in order to correct undesirable learning situations, the minister said.

Stock Exchange was off .06 to 25.80.

Montreal

All sectors continued to decline in light trading on the Montreal stock market today.

Combined volume on the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges at 1 p.m. was 667,100 shares, compared with 611,400 at the same time Thursday.

Utilities dropped 1.97 1/2 to 154.23, papers 1.53 to 89.82, the composite 1.39 to 219.82, industrials 1.32 to 230.44, and banks .55 to 298.92.

On the Montreal Stock Exchange, B.C. Forest Products dropped 2 1/4 to 32 1/4, Dominion Bridge 1 to 33 and Dominion 40 to 327 1/4.

On the Canadian Stock Exchange, Atlantic Tungsten rose six cents to 59 cents of 62,500 shares.

London

The London stock market was mixed today with a firmer undertone in quiet trading.

ICI, Glaxo, Decca, Hawke and Swan Hunter, while

Sons, Bowater, Vickers Beecham and Hudson's Bay declined.

Government bonds were little changed and oils and banks fluctuated narrowly.

Canadians were mixed.
Modest gains were seen in Abitibi, Dome Petroleum,
Massey, Gulf Oil and Hawker
Imperial Oil, Husky, Pan Ca-

GUYSBOROUGH, N.S. (CP) — Privy Council President Allan MacEachen arrived here Thursday afternoon to discover he was the only person in the area aware of the scheduled meeting.

His staff had mailed 1,500 invitations to the local post office to be circulated among area residents.

"Explained the embarrassed postmaster."

"We found them in Antigonish under an empty mailbag which had been dropped on top of them."

'Until Hell Freezes'

Times News Services

Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey told casual longshoremen Thursday that they can occupy Unemployment Insurance Commission offices in Vancouver "until hell freezes over" but it won't help their demands for their benefits.

Mackasey told the longshoremen that their dispute must be settled legally by a board of referees.

The board — made up of representatives from labor and management and a chairman from the UIC — was to meet later to hear the longshoremen's grievances.

"Occupation of the UIC offices doesn't frighten me, panic me or solve anything," Mackasey said.

The casual longshoremen are not members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and are employed only after the 1,800 regulars have been dispatched.

They are protesting a lack of work on British Columbia docks and the fact that they didn't receive unemployment insurance during the recent B.C. dock strike because of a UIC decision that they were unemployed as the result of the strike.

Meanwhile, still fit at 73, former prime minister John Diefenbaker called on his Progressive Conservative party Thursday to "throw away the feather duster and ... hit hard with a club" at election issues.

Diefenbaker told about 750 people at a rally in Dauphin, Man., that the Conservatives are the only party that can defeat the Liberal government.

Another top Tory, Allan Lawrence, former Ontario secretary of justice, said Thursday he believes Pierre Trudeau will not last much longer as leader of the Liberal Party, even if the Liberals are re-elected Oct. 30.

"Even supposing the Liberals go back with a majority — certainly if a minority — Trudeau's days are numbered," said Lawrence, who quit provincial politics last month to run as a federal candidate in an Ontario riding.

Lawrence told a news conference in Vancouver that there is a feeling of "revolution" against Trudeau and his policies right across the country and that Liberal organizers are well aware of it.

Trudeau, meanwhile, arrived in Winnipeg Thursday night after a verbal battle with open-line callers in Thunder Bay, Ont., and spent a quiet evening before beginning another day of campaigning today.

Jeering, gesticulating students surround Royal car

An Apology for the Queen

Times News Services

The Queen today received an apology from the student council of a Scottish university where she was jeered at and insulted by more than 400 students Thursday.

An official inquiry has been launched into the incident in which students chanted obscene songs, hurled expletives and waved wine and whisky bottles at the Queen and Prince Philip during a campus tour at Stirling University on Scotland's east coast.

Stirling, incidentally, was the headquarters of 14th-century nationalist leader William Wallace since immortalized as a revolutionary leader.

The students had earlier tried to stage a sitdown protest against the royal visit.

University authorities said preparations cost the equivalent of $2,490.

A spokesman said the majority of the university's 2,400 students behaved well.

There were no arrests.

Many of the crowd waved wine and whisky bottles. Others chanted "Queen out" and "Go home, you Hun" — presumably a reference to the Monarch's far-off German ancestry.

One person hurled a beer can in the direction of the monarch as another group of students ringed her chanting "she's no f—ing use at all."

Buckingham Palace was anxious to play down the incident which one seasoned British reporter described as the worst witnessed in 12 years of covering royal tours.

A spokesman said: "The Queen was not unduly concerned for her safety. She has faced this sort of confrontation before abroad — though never in this country."

The Queen appeared unshaken by the jeers and jostling. However, many members of the Royal party were grimaced.

The local chief of police, William McKellar, who was in the royal entourage, said of the protesters:

"They were drunken scum. Her Majesty's ears were assaulted with some words that I dare say she may have never heard before."

A spokesman for the university said later, however:

"The Queen told us she thoroughly enjoyed the visit. She was laughing all the way down the driveway as she left."

RCMP TO BOOST SIZE OF DRUG, FRAUD TEAMS

EDMONTON (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday night the RCMP will increase the size of its drug and fraud squads and "national crime intelligence unit" to combat increases in certain types of crime.

Speaking to about 75 former members of the force, the minister said an increase in organized crime, "economic crimes" and drug problems will be met with an increase in RCMP sections designed to combat these crimes.

The national crime intelligence unit is to be increased to 112 members from 89, effective April 1, he said.

The commercial fraud section is to be increased to a record level across the country. The section, formed in 1967 to combat what Goyer called "rich-men's crimes" committed by apparently legitimate companies and by businessmen who abuse lower-income groups, is to be increased to 161 persons from 128 by April 1.

Goyer told the veterans the RCMP will have to learn to cope with new crimes developing in Canadian society.

"The spread of terrorism within a multinational framework is but one example, and a frightening one. This is a new problem the RCMP must cope with."

The veterans were also told the word Police is being dropped as "the main basis of the RCMP's identification system." Goyer did not affirm that the force will retain the RCMP title, but said a decision will be made "in another month or two."

6-Year Term for Pusher

"Assassination by instalments" was the term used by Judge William Ostler to describe heroin trafficking when he imposed a six-year prison term for the first Victoria man to plead guilty here after Thursday's nation-wide drug sweep.

The raids by RCMP and local police Thursday netted more than 100 persons suspected of drug trafficking, but many more sought by police were still at large.

The raids culminated a six-month investigation by RCMP into peddling of heroin, cocaine, hashish, MDA and speed — methamphetamine. Warrants were made out for 276 persons.

By early today, about 115 persons had been picked up, mainly in Vancouver, Victoria, Toronto, Moncton, N.B., and Hull, Que.

Norman George Urquhart, 26, of an unknown address, pleaded guilty Thursday in Victoria provincial court to a charge of trafficking — in heroin.

An RCMP undercover agent, Constable Blaine Froats, 23, testified that Urquhart sold him one capsule of the narcotic for $20 in the washroom of the Churchill Hotel, 1140 Government, July 31.

Froats said Urquhart also drove him to a place where he could make a purchase July 18.

After the guilty plea was entered Thursday, Ostler ordered a remand for a pre-sentence report but Urquhart said such a report would be of little assistance.

"My background is not too reputable," he said.

Asked if he wished to say anything before sentencing today, Urquhart replied, "at the time when I sold it — I wasn't doing it for a living or profit."

Crown prosecutor Michael Hutchison said, "this offence, trafficking in heroin, is an addition to a lengthy criminal record. It's not necessary for me to point out the extent of drug use and abuse."

He told the judge the community's rights should be taken "seriously" into consideration before sentencing.

NDP Seeks A Share In Industry

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett said Thursday his government was prepared to begin immediately to pump investment capital into secondary industries in the province in exchange for shares or some other form of partial control of the companies.

He said he was inviting businessmen to come forward with ideas for joint government-business projects which he called "partnerships" — and added the warning that it would be the only way companies could get financial assistance from the provincial government.

There will be no more grants or giveaways to companies in B.C., he said. "The day of the ripoff is over. I won't change my mind about that."

On a long-term basis, he said, the time would come when the province would take over B.C. Tel and probably Westcoast Transmission and Inland Natural Gas as well.

B.C. Tel, which has a monopoly on telephone service in the province, is controlled by General Telephone and Electronics of New York. Westcoast Transmission, which supplies B.C. and the U.S. Pacific Northwest with natural gas, is U.S.-controlled. Inland Gas, which distributes in several B.C. regions, is Canadian-owned.

In Vancouver, J. E. Richardson, president and chief executive of B.C. Tel said:

"I have no comment to make until Premier Barrett and I have discussed the matter at the appropriate time. In my view, now is not the appropriate time to seek an appointment because I realize what a busy man the premier is."

He would not elaborate.

B.C. Tel would be purchased at a fair price to be negotiated, Barrett said, but he would not say whether shares would be bought up at the market price.

MARKET PRICE

Today the market was active on B.C. Tel shares with the price ranging between $55 and $57.

The price was $64.50 on election day.

Barrett stressed that financial partnerships being formed in the immediate future would be on a voluntary basis based upon the ideas of the companies themselves.

He noted that during the election campaign he had suggested that Toyota might want to start up an automobile assembly plant in B.C. with 49 per cent of the shares held by Toyota, 30 per cent by the provincial government and 21 per cent by the employees — who would purchase their shares with low-interest long-term loans from the government.

Not all partnerships would follow precisely that example but all would involve some type of provincial control in exchange for investment capital, he said.

MINIMUM WAGE HIKE AT SESSION

Premier Barrett Thursday said the minimum wage will be raised in British Columbia during the special session of the legislature which opens Tuesday.

He would not say what the new rate would be.

Present minimum level is $1.50 per hour.

An official NDP publication, NDP — A New Deal for People, issued during the election campaign, says:

"An NDP government will immediately raise the minimum wage to $2.50 per hour and will review this level annually."

Asked Thursday whether he intended to raise the minimum to $2.50 immediately, Premier Barrett said no details would be given prior to the opening of the legislature.

Muskie Claims Sabotage

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edmund Muskie has charged that his presidential race was victimized by "a systematic campaign of sabotage," including the use of his letterhead to make false allegations that two of his democratic opponents had engaged in illicit sexual acts.

Muskie said he has not ruled out the possibility of filing suit against the Committee for the Re-election of the President and certain White House officials linked in published reports of alleged sabotage.

The incidents mentioned by Muskie and his aides included:

The celebrated "Canuck letter," in which the senator was accused of condoning a racial slur (Canucks) on Americans of French-Canadian descent. According to federal investigators that letter was part of a hoax engineered by a White House official.

More than 14 months ago, Muskie said, facsimiles of his stationery were used to mail a Harris Poll reprint dealing with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and the incident at Chappaquiddick. Postal inspectors did not determine who sent the letters, which were mailed to Democratic members of congress and resulted in complaints to Muskie about unethical campaigning.

Disruption of a Muskie fund-raising dinner at the Washington Hilton on April 17. According to James Goodbody, the Muskie campaign's finance chairman, the following items arrived at the dinner — collect on delivery: $300 worth of liquor, a large $50 floral arrangement, cakes from the Watergate Pastry Shop and 200 pizzas. About a dozen African diplomats, Goodbody said, and — as a final touch — two magicians were mysteriously sent, including one who flew in from the Virgin Islands. The magicians said they had been hired to entertain children, but there were no children at the dinner. According to the former Muskie aide, most of the bills for the uninvited services remain unpaid.

Several days before the Florida primary, a flyer was distributed in parts of the state on Muskie stationery. It accused two of Muskie's Democratic opponents, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson, of illicit sexual activity. "The flyer was bogus and was apparently designed to hurt Muskie, while tarring Jackson and Humphrey too," said Muskie's administrative aide, John McEvoy.

McEvoy, recalling an incident widely reported during the New Hampshire primary campaign, said, "a number of Manchester residents complained of receiving phone calls in the middle of the night from people who identified themselves as canvassers from the Harlem for Muskie Committee. They were calling New Hampshire

ALLENDE MUZZLES RADIO STATIONS

SANTIAGO (AP) — The Chilean government took over control of all radio stations today as President Salvador Allende's troubles increased with the announcement of an indefinite strike by small business, retail shops, the construction industry and private farmers.

They were called out in support of a country-wide trucking strike to express their opposition to Allende's socialist program.

When Chileans woke up today, they discovered that the government had established a "national network" of all Chilean radio stations "until further notice."

This meant that the president's press office was in charge of broadcasting, thus denying opposition radio stations any voice in criticizing the government.

The Marxist president declared a state of emergency in Santiago and a large part of populous central Chile Thursday as a result of the trucking strike, now in its third day. Gasoline rationing was ordered as some service stations went dry, and some bakeries ran out of flour.

Socred Land-Swap Probe Urged

The Victoria branch of the B.C. Sierra Club has requested Resources Minister Bob Williams to investigate a 1969 land swap between the Social Credit government and a Campbell River logging company involving part of Strathcona Park.

The request came in the form of a letter today from the club to Williams alleging the legality of the land swap "seems to be questionable."

The land involved is a parcel of 7,500 acres in two separate areas of Strathcona Park, west of Courtenay, and a second parcel of 90 acres in the area of Cape Scott on the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

The Sierra Club says the logging company, which spokesmen John Willow refused to name, was given the logging rights to the Strathcona acreage for 10 years in exchange for the Cape Scott land, which apparently is not good timber land.

The Sierra Club's objections to the swap are two-fold. The first objection is to the concept of trading a piece of an already-established park (Strathcona) for a piece of land which is destined to become a provincial park (Cape Scott).

Secondly, they object to the ratio of the exchange. The 90 acres in exchange for the timber rights to 7,500 acres amounts to a ratio of 94 to 1, favoring the logging company, Willow said.

The Strathcona acreage constitutes about 4,000 acres in the Ranaid Creek area, totalling about 140 million board feet of lumber, and 3,500 acres at Oshinow Lake and Gretchen Creek estimated at about 90 million board feet.

The Sierra Club charges that the Cape Scott land is "covered by old growth, poor quality hemlock, cedar and balsam" totalling only about 2.5 million board feet. They say the asking price for the land in the summer of 1969 was $140,000.

The option to purchase the land was taken out in the fall of 1969 by an individual from Campbell River, the Sierra Club charges, and then the land was bought by the logging company.

The title was then turned over to the provincial government in exchange for the logging rights in the two areas of Strathcona Park.

A legal objection to the deal by the Sierra Club is based on the fact that no public auction took place before the deal was finalized, as is required under Section 47 of the Parks Act.

Furthermore, the contract between the provincial government and the lumber company ... fails to state requirements regarding the utilization of the timber resource, nor does it specify methods of logging, reforestation or the final disposal of logged lands," the letter to Williams says.

Willow said all the Sierra Club wants is to have the minister look into the situation and take appropriate measures "if an indication of any irregularities should become evident."

Willow said only about 20 per cent of the Strathcona Park land has been logged by the company so far, so that the remaining 80 per cent could still be saved.

He said he does not want to name the company because the club is more interested in information than in accusations.

Williams was unavailable for comment today.
